Letter Urging Freedom for Baby, Ladder Wood, Said Located in House in Rural Massachusetts.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 26.—(AP)—
From his death house cell today Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted murderer of the Lindbergh baby, called upon Dr. John F. Condon, a "full" statement.

"Not only do I wish this in my interest but also in the course of justice," he wrote in a statement he signed and gave to Robert Rosencranz and C. Lloyd Fisher, two of his attorneys. Dr. Condon, he added, "is holding the key in this case and with it the key of my cell."

"His statement came following allegations of the discovery of new Lindbergh ransom bills and of new kidnap evidence.

But from every official source, including Hauptmann's attorneys, came prompt disclaimers of knowledge of the purport of his disclosures.

An investigator for Hauptmann who requested that his name be withheld, said on "unimpeachable authority, despite denials of police," that approximately $700 in ransom money has been received by the Boston Federal Reserve Bank since the Bronx carpenter's arrest.

He further announced a house near Ashley, Mass., had yielded a letter dated March 10, 1932, ten days after the Lindbergh baby was kidnapped, stating:

"Why don't you return that poor little Lindbergh baby? You have had it long enough."

In the same house, this source declared, was found wood of "the same type" as that used in construction of the famous kidnap ladder, down which the kidnaper was alleged to have carried the baby from the nursery in Colonel Lindbergh's Soudan Hills house.

The letter, the investigator said, showed several characteristics similar to those evident in the ransom letters.

China Clipper Arrives
At Guam Island Base

GUAM ISLAND, Nov. 27.—(Wednesday).—(AP)—Initial trans-Pacific air mail came to the last leg of its 8,000-mile journey today as the trim
China Clipper landed here after flying the 1,536-mile stretch from Wake Island.

The seaplane landed at 3:07 p. m.
(11:07 p. m. Atlanta time), completing the flight in 10 hours and three minutes, and bringing it only 1,700 miles from Manila, end of the journey.
The flying boat is scheduled to complete its flight from Alameda, Cal., tomorrow by spanning the remaining link between here and Manila.
In about 48 1/2 hours of flying time, the China Clipper has covered 6,300 miles of its trail-blazing voyage to establish trans-Pacific air mail service.

Reds Blasted From Pernambuco; Troops Surround Rebels at Natal

Federal Government Hurls Land, Sea and Air Forces Upon Communist-Led Revolutionists; 90 Reported Killed During Rout; Civilians Aid Loyal Army.

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)
RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 26.— (UP)—The Brazilian government tonight hurled land, sea and air forces against "communists" revolting in the northern states of Rio Grande do Norte and Pernambuco.

The insurrection in Pernambuco was shattered, the war office said.
The rebel flag still fluttered over the important northern city of Natal but authorities predicted victory there shortly. The civilian population was said to be co-operating with the army to crush the followers of Louis Carlos Prestes, communist leader.

The rebel movement in the suburbs of the city of Pernambuco was turned into rout by artillery. After a night of bitter fighting in which 90 reportedly were killed in the outskirts of the populous seaport, the rebels fled from their barricades in Socorro across the Capiberibe river.

The scattered remnants remobilized in the town of Jabotao and endeavored to make a last stand there. But federal authorities struck before they could reorganize their defenses and the rebels again were compelled to flee.

The rebels were reported in complete disorder. They left many prisoners, machine guns and rifles in Jabotao.

Meantime police ferreted out the remnants of the insurrectionists in Pernambuco, arresting more than 80 suspects.

Tension in the capital lessened with reports from the north indicating the civilian population and local garrisons for the most part were loyal.
The uprising at Natal was led by noncommissioned officers of the garrison, who seized the state and local governments, turned out official and baricaded themselves under the red emblem of communism.

Authorities were on the alert throughout the nation—now under a state of siege proclaimed last night—but there was no indication the movement was spreading.

Official reports from Pernambuco agreed the insurrection was broken there.

Information from Natal was meager but authorities believed government troops, aided by state police, were drawing a net around the city and

Securities Commission Seeks To Force Utilities
To Register Immediately.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)— Bitter warfare between utilities and the New Deal blazed through two federal courts today toward an ultimate showdown on constitutionality of the holding company law.

The government took its first legal step. In New York, the Securities Commission asked the southern district court to compel the giant Electric Bond & Share Company and five of its immediate holding units to register by December 1 as required by the contested act.

This suit was offered by the utilities as a test of the law's validity. It contestedly was accepted by E. B. & S.
In Washington, the North American Company, another big holding concern, asked the District of Columbia supreme court to enjoin the commission from enforcing the act. It said the statute contained a "death sentence" for holding companies and contended
it was unconstitutional.

This made four major companies—
North American, Consolidated Gas of New York, Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, and United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia—that have asked injunctions against the government.

Still another step was taken by another outstanding utility concern. The Public Service Corporation of New Jersey applied to the commission for exemption from operation of the holding company law. Thomas H. McCarr, president, told stockholders the business "is predominantly, if not entirely, carried on in the state of New Jersey."

The law exempts companies predominantly intrastate. The registration of interstate holding companies which is being battled in the courts would vest in the commission control of certain activities such as security purchases and sales. This control would culminate in 1938 in power for the commission to dissolve many holding companies.

While it was not absolutely clear that any suit filed thus far would prevent the final constitutional test, E. B. & S. said in a state it hoped "the proceeding brought today by the Se-

COMMUNITY CHEST
GOAL IS IN SIGHT

$54,657 Subscriptions Reported; Two More Days Remain in Campaign.

Subscriptions of $54,657 were reported Tuesday by the army of volunteer workers in the Community Chest campaign, placing the drive ahead of any mark reached at this point in the past four years.

The report meeting Tuesday was the fourth of the campaign and saw a grand total raised of $274,936, little less than three-quarters of the goal necessary to meet human needs.

Two more days remain before the campaign is scheduled to close. The final midday report meeting will be held Wednesday, at which time several of the seven division directors hoped to go over their quotas for the first time in many years.

The neighborhood division, composed entirely of women and directed by Mrs. Norman Sharp, gave definite indication that its goal would be reached Tuesday when its total amounted to $13,911. The mark set is $15,315.

Mrs. Murdoch Walker, assistant director, said ten of the teams in the division had gone over their individual quotas, largely through increased individual subscriptions.

The division planned to launch an intensive cleanup campaign Wednesday, with several thousand prospective givers still to be contacted.

Hurd J. Crain, director of the central division, reported total subscriptions of $20,805, with the goal $28, 826.

"I have bet a hat against a cap that we will reach $30,000," he said.
The division is now in the final stretch.

Definite figures on the amount of increased giving that is pushing the campaign toward success were given by W. Stanton Hale, one of the secondary leaders in this division.

Last year this section received during the entire campaign 595 pledges totaling $3,335.

Already the division has received 875 pledges from the same territory, totaling $6,698.75 and are driving for a new record with a large number of pledges to be contacted in the cleanup work.

James F. Stengel, captain of one of the first teams in this section to go over its quota at the Friday report meeting, brought in an additional pledge of 21 pledges for $494. Tuesday. This team is still at work.

Advance Gifts Continue.
The advance gifts division, under Sherrard Kennedy, reported additional pledges of $1,000.

NANKING OFFICIALS
MOVE TO BLOCK
NEW STATE SET-UP

Japanese Spokesman Declares Movement of Nationalist Government Too Late To Prevent Aim.

NANKING, China, No. 27.— (Wednesday).—(AP)—A high government official told the Associated Press today the Chinese government had determined to meet with force any move to impose the autonomy program on the territory south of the borders of Hopei and Chahar provinces.

By A. T. STEELE.
(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press.)
SHANGHAI, Nov. 26.—The Chinese national government took concrete steps today to block the north China autonomy movement but a Japanese spokesman said they came "too late."

A five-point program of reform in north China to prevent secession was adopted by the government at Nanking, it was learned.

It included an order for the dismissal and arrest of Yin Jue-ling, leader of an independent state proclaimed yesterday at Tugchow for 25 counties of Hopei and Chahar provinces.

In a conference on the situation,
Major General Rensuke Isogai, Japanese military attaché here, reported he told General Chen Yi, of the Nanking government, that the program was too late.

Another Japanese spokesman here expressed doubt that the Nanking plan would be adequate and said Nanking should consider "popular" northern currents for autonomy.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS
ASK CO-EDUCATION

Questionnaires Answered
by Other Cities Show System Is Satisfactory.

Establishment of co-educational high schools for Atlanta students was under consideration yesterday by school administration officials.

Several months ago the matter was brought to the board of education by S. C. Nolant, ninth ward commissioner, and the board authorized establishment of a special board committee to study the proposal.

Questionnaires were addressed to 41 cities in Atlanta's population class.
Answers indicate that co-education is satisfactory in a vast majority of cases, it was announced.

For many years the sexes have been segregated in Atlanta, but there appears to be a strong move to convert the separate institutions into co-educational ones for the convenience of students and parents.

One of the major matters up for consideration is the proposed conversion of Tech and Boys' High schools into co-educational institutions and the Girls' High school on the south side of the city into a similar school.

A change would be a convenience to students, it was said, leaders also contend that co-educational institutions have had remarkable success in other cities and there is no reason to expect that they would not be entirely satisfactory for Atlanta.

Opponents contend that segregation of sexes at the adolescent age is highly desirable and should not be abandoned.
Sutton and Nolant's committee are expected to draft a recommendation to the board on the basis of expressions given the leading Atlantans to whom a questionnaire has been sent.

The matter may reach the board in time for action at the next regular meeting, slated for December 10.

Haile's Prisoner in Golden Chains, Deposed Emperor Lij Yasu, Passes

By JAMES A. MILLS.

ADDIS ABABA, Nov. 26.—(AP)—
The death of Lij Yasu, one-time Ethiopian ruler whom Emperor Haile Selassie had held captive in a luxurious palace, was announced by government officials today.

With his death, Haile Selassie became the undisputed sovereign of what Ethiopian officials called a united nation. They said Lij Yasu's death was more important to the independence and solidarity of Ethiopia than a defeated emperor, it was said.

Lij Yasu was deposed in 1931 and held in chains. He was a member of the ruling dynasty and had been a prisoner of the emperor since 1931.

SELASSIE CLAIMS

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)
If Ethiopia has suffered a disastrous setback on the Ogaden front which may have important bearing on the result of the Italo-Ethiopian war and upon diplomatic negotiations to end it.
The Ethiopians Tuesday night announced they had driven the Italians back to Wardere and Walwal, villages in the disputed Ethiopia-Italian Somaliland boundary district which the Italians held last December.

The question now is, "Can the Ethiopians be believed?" They find themselves in this respect in the predicament of the proverbial "boy who cried wolf." Having announced many synthetic victories, they find it hard to gain credence for what appears to be a legitimate announcement.

Details May Vary.
Details of the Ethiopian reconquering of Ogaden may vary from the truth but all indications point to its substantial accuracy. The Italians themselves recently have admitted that after penetrating with flying columns to within striking distance of Jijiga, they were fighting the enemy south of Gorahai, more than 100 miles south.

It seems probable that General Rodolfo Graziani's columns over-reached themselves and were compelled to withdraw to safer ground to avoid being cut off from the rear by Ras Desta Denta's warriors.

In connection with the reported Italian withdrawal from Ogaden the

M. LAVAL WARNS
OF PERIL TO FRANCE

Premier Seeks Support by Accepting Plan To Dissolve Fascist Group.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Premier Laval, in a radio appeal to the nation, warned it tonight "the destiny of the franc is at stake" Thursday when parliament returns to support or overthrow his government.

Earlier, Laval attempted to save his cabinet by accepting proposals designed to disband political troops such as the fascist Croix de Feu.

Saying he had chopped the 1936 budget down 16 1/2 per cent by the decreased laws, the premier cited gold losses of the Bank of France and warned: "Anxiety has reappeared and the uncertainty, if it is prolonged, will threaten to be fatal to our finance."

"We must have a rapid vote. We shall ask parliament to decide quickly. If not, the situation will speedily grow worse."

Laval said if existing regulations were not sufficient to halt recent political disorders "we will extend them by imposing respect for the law upon all parties."

As foreign minister, Laval said France and France were agreed from the beginning in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict to avoid all "military sanctions and any measures likely to lead to a naval blockade. Thus the closing of the Suez canal was never considered."

He insisted that the Franco-Soviet pact is "directed against no country."
We shall turn our backs upon none of our friendships and will respect all engagements.

"We hope sincerely to establish and develop a relationship as a good neighbor."

Home-Coming Array Donned by City
For Visit of Roosevelt on Friday

Final Plans for Celebration Await Only Approval of Secret Service Chief; Tickets Good Only for Souvenirs; Visitors Begin Pouring Into Town.

With all Atlanta arrayed in holiday dress, plans for the Roosevelt home-coming celebration here Friday were complete yesterday, awaiting the approval of Colonel E. W. Starling, chief of the presidential secret service, today.

Colonel Starling, who is at Warm Springs, will go over the entire route of the Roosevelt parade today, from Fort McPherson to the Atlanta University, rigidly inspecting every foot of the distance. After his trip over the city he will confer with General Chairman Erle Coker on the last-minute details of the celebration.

Tickets Only Souvenirs Now.
Last-minute decision not to use the 150,000 tickets distributed over the state for anything other than sou-
open to the first-comers Friday, assuring a packed stadium long before the President arrives at 1 o'clock for his address. Emphasizing that the tickets were not necessary for admission to Grant field, Chairman Coker said that the Roosevelt headquarters would continue to distribute them in large numbers for the visitors to keep as mementos of the President's visit here.

"The series of speeches over the radio as well as graphic descriptions of the presidential parade will be broadcast to the assemblage in the stadium," Chairman Coker said.
"There will not be a dull moment. We also have arranged for the Emory Glee Club to be present from 12 until 1 o'clock to offer a few selections in the event that there is a lull in the activity."

The celebration chairman said that between 85,000 and 100,000 people would be cared for in the stadium.

No Parking Signs Posted.
Every section of the city was decorated yesterday, not only the route to be taken by the President, but also the outlying sections. Roosevelt pictures were everywhere and there was an abundance of flags. Streets to be blocked for the celebration and those on which no parking will be permitted all carried posters announcing these facts, three days in advance.

Atlanta's "white way" lights will blaze tonight in the downtown section, for the first time in three years, in

ROOSEVELT DAY IS TRAFFIC TEST

Lessons of Safety Drive To Be Aid in Handling of Huge Crowds Friday.

Lessons learned in The Constitution's safety campaign are expected to result in a minimum of motor accidents in Atlanta and vicinity during the great Roosevelt home-coming celebration this Friday.

As the day nears for the celebration, which will bring to this city probably half a million persons and thousands of automobiles, members of the Safety Council expressed the hope that accidents will be reduced to a negligible quantity.

Co-operation Needed.
"What we anticipate is a demonstration of safety that will show clearly and conclusively what can be done in the way of safety by co-operation along these lines," members of the council said yesterday.

"There will be a splendid opportunity to show the public just what can be done by observance of simple rules of safe motoring and safe walking Friday when such a large crowd will converge upon the city."

"Following the rules of safety, there is no reason why the day should not pass into history as being not only a glorious tribute to President Roosevelt, but a tribute to all those who have proved beyond the slightest doubt that observance of safety rules means something," they said.

In this connection, it was pointed out that thousands of visitors will be here Friday to hear and see the President and that the day can be a red-letter one in so far as safety is concerned.

Thousands of persons have signed pledges stating that they will observe the simple rules which mean so much in preserving life and limb from ravages exacted by the grim phrase "motor toll."

Along these lines, it was reiterated that observing the rules of safe driving is not a difficult task, but one which requires only the "desire and will to prevent loss of life and limb."

As further proof of the evident need for safe driving there came word from Chicago last night that governors of nine states have enlisted their states in the nationwide campaign to cut down the mounting number of deaths from automobile accidents.

The National Safety Council, sponsoring the nationwide five-year drive to cut automobile casualties, revealed that promises of co-operation have been assured them by the governors.

report by H. R. Ekins from Harar Monday night that Graziani's main army had slipped the mountain fringe to within 60 miles of Harar while native columns were "feinting" in Ogaden to keep Dejazmach Nazif's hordes occupied assumes new interest. Ekins reported 12 Italian planes flew over Harar Tuesday.

Compromise Seen.
If the Italians really have lost Ogaden, their plan to unite Somaliland and Eritrea through the eastern Ethiopian desert seems doomed. Premier Mussolini may be more willing to compromise diplomatically.

Diplomatic developments of the last 24 hours have had an interesting result. Mussolini's threats to quit the League and retaliate by warlike measures induced Premier Laval, of France, to get the League oil embargo meeting postponed. Britain was induced to agree.
The United States, having led the parade by warning United States oil exporters against trading with Italy, then found itself marching alone. The British, eager to keep the Roosevelt administration playing its League role, announced yesterday that it still favored an oil embargo.

It will be interesting to see if Washington obligingly moves out ahead on the next League step against Italy or whether its fingers burn by the present case—it will wait for Geneva to take the lead.

PROFITS OF WAR HIT BY STATE OFFICIALS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(P)—In unusually emphatic language, a State Department spokesman today slashed at the making of war profits by small groups and hit again at what were termed abnormal sales of war supplies to Italy and Ethiopia.

The same high official, who declined to be quoted, asserted the administration was uncompromisingly determined to pursue a completely independent neutrality, regardless of what any other nation or group of nations may do.

This statement was directed at reports that the League of Nations' decision in considering an oil and steel embargo against Italy had caused the American government to lessen its pressure against such exports to both belligerents.

Shortly afterward, the Italian ambassador, Augusto Rosso, held a brief conference with Secretary Hull at the State Department but no details of their discussion were revealed. The ambassador would say only that he had discussed the "general situation" with Hull.

No Changes Seen.

125 Italian Pilots Pledge Themselves To Certain Doom When Ordered

ROME, Nov. 26.—(P)—Italy is reported to have an aerial "death squad" of 125 men pledged to die.

Friends of certain aviators today today that these men are volunteers who will go to certain death if they are ordered to attack a hostile naval fleet.

To each of these men, it was said, has been assigned an airplane carrying one gigantic bomb.

Each man of the "death squad" would pick an enemy warship, and dive down as a living projectile. The bomb would be big enough to wreck a warship.

AMERICAN'S DEEP PARALLELS PLAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(P)—American army and navy officials today denied any knowledge of any organization, or plans for the organization in this country, of squads of soldiers or sailors pledged to death for their country or flag.

Each man of the "death squad"—reported in Rome dispatches—is, they said, one of several manifestations of chaut Fleet Corporation, said today he knew of no changes in the corporation's policy toward these shipments.

Commenting upon reports that the tanker Ulysses might be allowed to sail from New York for the war zone, Schell said, "There has been no change in the status of the ship. It is owned by the American Tanker Corporation and the Merchant Fleet Corporation holds its defaulted mortgage. Schell emphasized that it would be impossible to take forcible action against the vessel in case of violation of the government's neutrality policy.

In speaking today of the government's policy, the State Department spokesman asserted that the administration had not tried to interfere with a normal flow of exports. The difficulty, he added, was in determining what constituted normal and what abnormal shipments of "key" commodities.

System Sought.
Coincidentally, he intimated that some system of quota restrictions on such exports was being worked out. This indication, however, was not amplified.

Recently Secretary Hull directed public attention to the considerable increase in exports of oil, copper, scrap iron and steel, motor trucks and tractors to Italy, and announced that such shipments were contrary to the government's neutrality policy.

This policy was followed shortly by the dispatch of letters by the Shipping Board Bureau to all shipping lines indebted to the government, implying that financial assistance might be cut off if their vessels were permitted to move such cargoes to the war zone.

The State Department, the spokesman continued, feels it has no apologies to make for what he termed its efforts to avoid feeding the flames of war for the sake of some war profits that a few individuals might get.

WARTIME MEASURES APPLIED BY MUSSOLINI

ROME, Nov. 26.—(P)—Besieged economically by 52 nations, Italy applied wartime measures tonight to combat sanctions.

Military silence fell on those who might give "information useful to the enemy."

Premier Mussolini suspended publication of statistics that might show the League of Nations powers where to put on the pressure to block most effectively Italy's war in Ethiopia.

The Bank of Italy, for the first time in history, refused to publish a statement showing its gold reserves.

Gold was being contributed in great quantities by Italy's population, but no one expected it to balance the recent outflow which for six months had averaged 20 tons a month.

So much gold, silver, copper and iron has been brought to the government that leading fascists called the movement a plebiscite in which the country expressed its approval of Il Duce's moves in Africa and his stand against sanctions.

Several priests expressed their approval of the government's position. An official communique claimed 100 Ethiopians, including two provincial governors were killed in the battle north of Dolo, which is in southern Ethiopia on the border of Italian Somaliland.

Italian losses were placed at four native soldiers killed, five wounded and two missing. The Ethiopians were completely routed after a five-hour engagement, the communique asserted, and 50 rifles, several pistols and an ammunition dump were seized.

Fascist airplanes, it was stated, flew over the important city of Harar, in eastern Ethiopia, and others bombarded an Ethiopian fortification at neighbor with Germany. A France strong, militant and pacific has nothing to fear.

The cabinet sought to dodge a left wing attack in the chamber of deputies on the issue of the Croix de Feu (cross of fire) whose dissolution is demanded by leftists.

Thus the government staked its life instead on the "Battle of the France" over Laval's semi-dictatorial decree.

Pierre Taittinger, leader of the nationalistic "young patriots," announced that his organization is planning to escape dissolution by incorporating as a political party.

Veterans "Wait and See."
Leaders of the Croix de Feu, a growing organization of World War veterans, announced they were "waiting to see what happens."

The government goes before the chamber of deputies Thursday. Friends of Laval, leader, said attempts at dissolution might lead "to civil war."

Laval, with an appeal to "patriotism," is insisting upon a vote of confidence first on his financial policy and decree laws intended to keep the budget balanced. The cabinet is regarded as safer on this issue, since its enemies fear they would be held responsible in case an unbalanced budget brought devaluation.

Edouard Herriot indicated to his radical socialist followers to support Laval and there were indications a crisis might be averted.

The government announced its acceptance of a report by Georges Chauvin, radical socialist deputy, calling for the disbanding of "sedition" or semi-military organizations.

These questions will be taken up after the chamber disposes of an interpellation upon the financial policy.

Responsible Japanese quarters said the program adopted by the executive committee, in addition to the arrest of Kuo, included:

1. Establishment of a Peiping office of the executive committee, with War Ministers Ho Ying-chin in charge.
2. Abolishment of the Peiping branch of the military council.
3. Transfer of the council's business to a military affairs committee, headed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.
4. Appointment of General Sung Cheh-yuan, north China leader, reportedly a Japanese ally, to head an autonomous state, to the new post of pacification commissioner for Hopei and Chahar provinces.

Reds Not Responsible for Revolt, Brazilian Expert Writes in Analysis

Videla Says Disorders Originate in Agricultural Areas, Aride to Communism, and Attributes Infections to Disgruntled "Democrats."

By CARLOS J. VIDELA, Latin-American Editor, North American Newspaper Alliance. (Copyright, 1935, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

An allegedly communistic uprising under way in northern Brazil, where fighting has been reported between rebellious soldiers, led by non-commissioned officers, and loyal troops. At the same time news comes of a widespread red plot with ramifications in Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay, led by Luis Carlos Prestes, a Brazilian extremist.

In the light of former uprisings in eastern South America, and judging from present conditions in those countries, it would not be amiss to say that the communistic nature attributed to the Brazilian revolt and the ramifications of a continent-wide movement contained in the news dispatches are open to serious doubt.

Dissatisfaction among certain army elements in Brazil has been smoldering for some time, and the tenseness of the situation has been accentuated by extremist movements, both right and left. A short time ago the Rio de Janeiro government decreed the dissolution of the leftist league, which was charged with subversive activities. This league had been under fire from the integralists party, a semi-fascist, green-shirted organization, having for its symbol the Greek letter sigma. Clashes between integralists and leftists have been frequent recently, resulting in a number of casualties. Lately the integralists themselves have been the object of petitions to the government for their dissolution.

The fact that the disorder is reported in the northern states of Brazil, which are the less developed and populated of the country, diminishes its importance. With the Rio de Janeiro regime, backed by the powerful southern states and their armed forces, any uprising in the northern states could be crushed in a short time.

How much communism and how much traditional politics are involved is at least a matter of conjecture. However, it is reasonable to assume that the alleged red plot is not the paramount ingredient, despite the presence of Prestes, a former Brazilian exile, who acquired a coat of Moscow varnish during a one-year visit to Russia.

As to the ramifications of any such movement in Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay, one would be safe in discounting them. A red agitation center operating in Montevideo, Uruguay, where a branch of the third international has been active.

Paraguay still under the spell of the fervid nationalism created by the Chaco War against Bolivia, could hardly be considered a prospect for an extremist flareup, at least for the time being.

DEPOSED EMPEROR OF ETHIOPIA PASSES

Ras Tafari's wife, he fought the new government. But Ras Tafari's wife was defeated with great slaughter October 27, 1916. Ras Mikael was captured and Ras Tafari was a wanderer.

There was sporadic fighting until Ras Tafari was captured in 1921. In 1932, he escaped, disguised as a woman, but was again seized before a fully-planned revolt could get under way.

Many reports circulated since then that he had died, but the Ethiopian government revealed last June that he was held in the villa at Tiara Mulata.

It was reported that Ras Tafari was allowed great comforts, and that though he was fastened by chains, they were of gold. For a while it was thought he was held in the emperor's own palace in Addis Ababa, to prevent kidnapping by the Italians, who allegedly had attempted this some years ago as part of a plan to make him emperor.

His death, however, was not unexpected. He was 67 years old, and had been ill for some time. He died at 9:27 o'clock, and a second measure was sounded as a precautionary measure shortly after arrival of first companies.

Directed by Assistant Field Chief P. S. Fleming and William Butler, firemen battled 15 minutes to keep the flames away from the tanks in which gasoline was stored.

The blaze was soon brought under control. The fire started with a sudden flare-up, fireman said.

NEGLIGENCE CHARGED IN COAST SODA DEATHS

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—(P)—A coroner's jury accused two men of "criminal negligence" tonight after an inquest into San Francisco's poisoning of a soda mystery which caused three deaths.

The jury named Nick Manno, salvage firm owner, and Joseph Rosenthal, department store proprietor, in its verdict which declared the three victims died from taking the poison product.

Authorities have charged that one of six barrels of salvaged soda sent to the Rosenthal store from Manno's business was contaminated, which was sold in bulk as soda along with the baking powder from the other barrels.

Alfred Perry, Mrs. Beattie Shufelt and Katherine Ogle died after taking the soda.

The jury recommended legislation to prevent a recurrence of the accident.

Darrel Morris, buyer for the store, testified that he had a standing order with Manno's to deliver damaged canned goods and other articles of a similar nature.

Coroner T. B. W. Leland asked if Morris made any effort to ascertain the source of the "junk" he bought. The buyer replied he did not.

ITALIANS APOLOGIZE FOR PADUA ATTACKS

American Physicians, Wives Hear "Regrets" Through Embassy.

ROME, Nov. 26.—(P)—Italians have made two apologies to two American physicians and their wives who said they were menaced by a fascist students' mob in Padua last Saturday, it was said at the American embassy today.

The embassy added, however, it still may make representations to the Italian government regarding the incident.

The Americans—Dr. and Mrs. Frederick P. Moersch and Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Bolman, of the Mayo Institute, Rochester, Minn.—said the students in the university town ripped American flags from their automobile, which bore a British license plate.

The prefect of Padua, the embassy said, offered an apology to the American consul sent from Venice to investigate. The prefect and other authorities said the students who participated in the demonstration had apologized on the spot, through an interpreter, to the Americans. Their superior ordered the apology, it was said.

The apology was followed by the students' cries of "long live America," according to a report from the Venice consul to Breckinridge Long, United States ambassador.

The ambassador is considering whether the case should be presented to the Italian foreign office.

SOLICITOR'S OFFICE WON'T PROBE DEATH

Hudson Says He's Satisfied Police Are Conducting Thorough Investigation.

No investigation into the fatal shooting of Robert Douthett Hunt, who died Sunday, will be conducted by the solicitor-general's office, it was undertaken at this time by the solicitor-general's office, it was undertaken at this time by the solicitor-general's office.

Hudson said he had been approached by relatives of Hunt with the request that the solicitor-general's office investigate the circumstances of the shooting. He said that it was his belief that the police were conducting a thorough investigation and such action by his office was not necessary.

Coroner Paul Donehoo will conduct an inquest at 10 o'clock this morning into the shooting. The coroner conferred yesterday with Solicitor-General John A. Boykin as to the provisions of the law relating to justifiable shooting of a citizen by an officer of the law.

The coroner declined last night to reveal the results of his conference with Boykin.

CITY OF NEW ORLEANS IS WITHOUT WATERExplosion in Southwest Part of City Damages Purification Plant.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—An explosion at the purification plant in the southwest section of New Orleans tonight cut off the entire city's water supply, police said. The extent of the damage or cause of the blast could not be immediately determined.

Disruption of the city's huge water system threw the city into a hubbub. Telephone operators were deluged with calls. Police headquarters were unable to contact the purification plant and were without any details of the blast. Newspaper offices were flooded with inquiries. Hospitals were deeply concerned over the lack of water and restaurants, hotels, saloons and drug stores were greatly inconvenienced.

Stereotyping departments of New Orleans morning newspapers faced an acute problem, since they were without water necessary to wash and cool the metal plates.

It subsequently was learned that a main pipe at the purification plant had burst.

Employees at the plant said they did not know the cause of the break, which was accompanied by a loud blast.

While there was no fire, fire-fighting apparatus was rushed to the scene.

Water was shut off for 85 minutes.

Clipper's Flight to Wake Island
Described by Capt. Edwin MusickGiant Flying Boat's Officer Praises Navigation Record Across Broad Expanse of Pacific as One of Greatest in History.By EDWIN C. MUSICK, Master of the China Clipper.(Copyright, 1935, by North American Newspaper Alliance)ON BOARD THE CHINA CLIPPER, OVER THE PACIFIC, Nov. 27.—(By Wire)—

As the China Clipper speeds along on the fourth lap of the air-mail route from California to the Orient—the water supply, police said. The extent of the damage or cause of the blast could not be immediately determined.

The 1,200-mile jump from Midway island to Wake island was the shortest but most difficult span in the entire 8,000-mile aerial bridge across the Pacific, and called for one of the most exacting feats of navigation on record—striking the nose of a tiny point smaller than a pinhead on the vast map of the Pacific ocean.

It is one thing to navigate a surface vessel, moving a mile every two minutes, with a wealth of navigational aids at this command; the exacting task of the mariner is quite another to guide an air liner racing a mile every 24 seconds, enshrouded by clouds or above them, with endless horizons of open sea below, with the goal even from high altitude visible under best conditions scarcely 20 miles.

The China Clipper's flight over this critical section of the Pan-American Airways to the Orient is a graphic demonstration of the organization of modern air transportation.

48 MEN REQUIRED.

The operation of each ocean-going Clipper ship requires the expert services of 48 men on the ground and six aboard.

With nine passengers aboard and nearly three tons of cargo including 1,853 pounds of air mail plus six tons of fuel, the China Clipper quickly took off from the lagoon at Midway 12 minutes after daylight.

One of our only two check marks—the international date line—was crossed 205 miles out at 19:35 Greenwich mean time (1:35 p. m., Atlanta time), and the China Clipper flew from Monday into Tuesday.

The only other check was a Matson liner charted on our map another 150 miles ahead. We mutually congratulated ourselves when First Officer Sullivan called out, "Steamer Ahoy," and all pressed against the portholes to peer 30 miles ahead. It took only 14 minutes to overhaul the S. S. President Lincoln, Captain Hansen, 11 days out of San Francisco and bound for Yokohama, at 10:50 Greenwich mean time in latitude 25:25 N. longitude 177:31 E. We exchanged radio greetings and dipped our wings in salute, getting an acknowledgment of three scuffs of white steam, although we did not hear the whistles.

When we passed the half-way mark, 621 miles out, Second Officer King broke out the Chinese mess attendants aboard and had them serve us a sumptuous lunch in grand style in the lounge room. It was meal time for all aboard, including 25 canaries, each complete with a pound of birdseed. They were forcibly migrating to enliven the deadly silence of isolated Wake island.

Our Chinese passengers, still dazed at this bustling space, spent most of their time squatting in the corner of the lounge room, never looking outside. For three hours more we matched wits with the clouds and winds, seeking the best level and ending at 2,400 feet, flying by instruments through moderately heavy clouds.

We covered the final 400 miles in two hours 20 minutes. Then Wake island flashed by radio that we had been sighted fully two minutes before we aboard could distinguish the small dark spot which is the Pan-American Airways midocean air base No. 3 on this skyway to the Orient.

We covered the 1,252 route miles at an average speed of 148.7 miles per hour, landing five minutes ahead of schedule, at 2:40 Greenwich mean time (8:40 p. m., Monday, Atlanta time), with 5,242 miles of the Pacific behind us.

We arose before dawn. By the time we finished breakfast, all the cargo was aboard the China Clipper, the ship inspection had been verified and the engines had been warmed up. The all-night weather watches completed the final details of our flying map, and we went aboard. Beating the sun's appearance above the horizon by 60 seconds, our keel broke the water of the Wake island lagoon at 19:04 G. M. T. (1:04 p. m., Tuesday, Atlanta time).

Responsibility on Noonan.

Dense clouds, pressing down to the 2,000-foot level, put the entire load of responsibility on Navigation Officer Noonan's dead reckoning, and those constantly alert radio compass stations fore and aft which never let go of us a single minute. Everything was functioning as planned, and the China Clipper settled down to the long 1,500-mile drive ahead. In the first three hours, we made 470 miles, averaging 166 miles per hour on 60 per cent horsepower.

The weather reports had promised better winds aloft 500 miles out. To verify that, we spoke the U. S. S. Chester, eastbound from Manila, which we met at 22:21 G. M. T. We exchanged greetings and extended an invitation to Secretary of War Dorn, aboard the Chester, from J. T. Trippie, president of Pan-American Airways, to inspect the trans-Pacific air bases. We also invited Secretary Dorn to be the guest of the Wake island staff at Thanksgiving dinner.

We passed the ship at latitude 17:26 north, longitude 15:09:22 east. Then, climbing through the 3,000-foot layer of clouds, we burst out into an empty world of dazzling sun and shine. The cloud moisture on the wings flashed every color of the spectrum and the propellers described great glistening arcs as we sped ahead in a world all to ourselves—except for the nine radio stations and three radio compass stations that kept their invisible fingers on us.

During the last hour we made 170 miles, a 30-mile tail wind enabling us to reduce engines to half horsepower.

Big Brothers Plan Charity Ball at Mosque

Big Brother Charity Ball at Mosque
On December 18 Is Being PlannedBy THE BIG BROTHER EDITOR.
Plans for the greatest Big Brother ball ever to be held here were laid yesterday afternoon by a group of Big Brothers, who met at the Henry Grady hotel.

A queen, who will preside over the gay, colorful affair, will be elected before the ball, Mrs. Katherine Conner, who presided at the meeting, announced.

Organization work for the Big Brother club was progressing rapidly yesterday under the direction of Cecil Hall, general chairman, and Councilman Howard Haire, director.

Ticket Sale Planned.
A campaign to sell thousands of tickets to the grand charity ball on December 18 at the Shrine Mosque will be inaugurated immediately by W. L. Van Dyke, who is chairman of the third annual Big Brothers ball committee.

As hundreds of Atlantans who sold Big Brothers editions of The Constitution last year and the year before began to rally to the club again this year, leaders of the club became enthusiastic. They said the club will be larger and stronger this year than it has ever been.

Big Brothers are those Atlantans who bring cheer and happiness to thousands of Atlanta children every Christmas. They simply give two hours of their time on Sunday morning, December 15, to selling the special Big Brother edition of The Constitution to their friends and neighbors.

The money they receive and that raised by the grand charity ball all goes to buy bright gifts and presents for poor and unfortunate children who otherwise would have no Christmas.

Success Predicted.
"I am confident that the charity ball this year will be the greatest success we've had since the Big Brother Club was organized by The Constitution and the American Legion Post No. 1, its sponsors," Ball Chairman Van Dyke said yesterday.

He and Mrs. Conner will announce further plans for the queen contest in the near future and all Atlantans will have a hand in selecting the beautiful young girl who will be crowned "Queen of the Grand Charity Ball" with appropriate ceremonies.

The queen will preside over the ball, where a beauty contest will be staged as a feature attraction.

Van Dyke has already arranged for George Berkeley's 12-piece orchestra to furnish music at the brilliant affair. Every year the most prominent people in Atlanta and Georgia attend the charity ball and the ballroom scene is a brilliant one.

General Chairman Hall outlined the methods of selling tickets and soon many Atlantans will be offered the chance to help in this most worthy charity.

Hall said a number of ward organization meetings are to be held within a week or so, and ward captains will be named. Prizes will be given to the ward units which sell the most Big Brother papers on December 15.

Many persons will be glad of the opportunity of being Big Brothers and Big Sisters, and the purpose of enrolling is carried elsewhere in this paper.

Simply sign your name, address, ward and telephone numbers and send the coupon to the Big Brothers' Club, or you can leave it at Big Brothers headquarters, on the ground floor of the Chamber of Commerce building. Whichever you do, do it now.

Knocked unconscious by two negroes as he was fixing a truck, Clifton church road, DeKalb county, Ben Gresham, Decatur school board official, was robbed of $100 and left unconscious on the roadside late yesterday afternoon.

Gresham's truck became disabled. As he was working on the motor, two negroes stepped from an automobile, felled him with blows on the head, and took his wallet.

Gresham was found by a passing motorist, who called police. He is secretary-treasurer of the West Side school board, and lives on Clifton church road, near the holdup scene. The negroes escaped.

Beside Scott, those arrested gave their names as James Jackson, 19, 560 Lambert street; Calvin Prince, 19, 546 Strong street; Morris Huxton, 23, Millers alley; Leon Barnes, 18, 378 Griffin street, and Norris Palmer, 19, 581 Simpson street.

The arrest over the week-end of seven young negroes allegedly connected with a series of robberies in Atlanta was revealed last night. The negroes were charged with suspicion of burglary, and, police said, six confessed and named the seventh, who identified himself as Raymond Scott, 21, of a Lambert street address, as the leader. Scott denies the charge, however.

The negroes, ranging in age from 18 to 23 years, were organized along military lines, police said, their alleged leader being "captain" and the others holding "ranks" of "lieutenant" and "privates."

According to police, the gang met nightly and reported their activities to their "captain."

Police said the negroes were connected with the theft last Saturday of the automobile of Ambrose Moses, of 500 Carter street; theft of clothing valued at $25 from a store at 173 Mitchell street, in which an automobile jack was thrown through a front display window, and the stealing of a laundry truck of November 9, from which $275 worth of clothing was allegedly taken.

Mayor Key May Renew Fight for Liquor Store

Mayor Key may renew his fight for establishment of a municipally-owned and operated liquor store, which he said would raise $1,000,000 a year and reinstate the salary cuts imposed on city employees.

During a discussion yesterday with J. Sid Tiller, chairman of the Atlanta-Fulton County Board of Public Welfare, Tiller asked if the salaries of employees will be restored in the 1936 budget. Tiller formerly was alderman from the third ward.

"Just as soon as I can get a council with enough nerve to vote for the liquor store, we will restore all the pay cuts and not just 5 per cent of them," Key countered.

Tiller was one of those who fought the liquor store proposal which Key championed and which council turned down.

"By selling pure liquor at a moderate profit, we could raise $1,000,000 a year and at the same time deal a death blow to bootlegging," the mayor added.

Key declined to say whether he will reopen his fight for the store, although it is known that there is a strong move to restore a part of the salary cuts now in force against municipal workers.

Son in Miami.

George N. Woods, for 10 years a deputy tax collector for Fulton county and church and civic leader, died yesterday following a heart attack at Jackson, Ga. He was 51 years of age.

Mr. Woods had been a victim of heart trouble for several years. He apparently had been in good health, however, when he and his wife and two sons, Leroy and Warren Richardson Woods, left the city early yesterday morning in their car to spend the Thanksgiving holiday with his other son, George Woods Jr., in Miami.

Mr. Woods was a prominent member of the Capitol View Presbyterian church and had served the institution for some time as an elder. Active in young people's affairs, he organized the Boy Scout Troop No. 39, which was sponsored by the Men's Bible Class of the church, and he served the organization as Scoutmaster. At the time of his death, the troop was the largest in the city.

Mr. Woods' home is at 1344 Stewart avenue. He is survived by his wife; three sons; a daughter, Mrs. C. Kirkland; three sisters, Mrs. A. B. Davidson, Mrs. George Carter and Mrs. John Reese, and a brother, T. E. Woods.

Funeral services will be held at 1 o'clock this afternoon at the Capitol View Presbyterian church with the Rev. Julian Warner officiating.

Palbearers will be T. C. Smith, E. J. Brewer, Luther Peacock, W. A. Dobson, Andy Stewart, T. E. Suttles, W. O. Hollingsworth and C. E. Belle Isle.

Following rites here the body will be taken by Autry & Lowndes to Adairsville, Ga., for burial.

REVOLUTION IN BRAZIL

The seizure of the important Brazilian cities of Natal and Pernambuco, following communist-inspired uprisings in the states of Pernambuco and Rio Grande do Norte, adds another chapter to the many revolutions that have plagued this great Latin-American nation since its creation.

The serious nature of the present revolt is evidenced by the action of the government in declaring a two-month "state of siege," comparative to martial law in the United States, and the dispatch of large army and navy units to the troubled area.

The socialist-communist plot, headed by Luiz Carlos Prestes, so-called "Knight of Hope" of the abortive 1924 revolution, contemplates, it is reported, the establishment of a communist form of government throughout the country, with nationalization of banks, expropriation of foreign vested interests and a declaration of war against "all foreign imperialism." Among the outstanding leaders of the uprising are said to be sergeants of the army, seeking evidently to emulate Cuba's Batista in becoming dictators of the country.

The ignorance and poverty of the greater portion of Brazil's population furnishes fertile ground for the planting of the seeds of communism and discontent. Conditions in the interior of the country are forcefully described by Rev. Henry W. Russell, of Georgia, in one of his recent letters to The Constitution, in which he writes of "the lavish display of squalor and poverty and the attendant by-products of these two sisters of human misery."

The present administration, headed by President Vargas, has been in office for five years. In the elections of 1930, Vargas was opposed by Dr. Julio Prestes, the administration candidate. Prestes received 1,093,027 votes and Vargas 666,152, the former carrying 17 of the 20 states and the important city of Rio de Janeiro, but before his inauguration the Vargas forces, claiming fraud in the election, staged a successful revolution and Vargas assumed the office of president.

Previous to this time the conservatives, under the leadership of Washington Luis and Prestes, his prospective successor, had ruled the country, despite numerous unsuccessful revolutions, since 1889. Under this rule the government was dominated by the two states of Minas Gerais and Sao Paulo.

The Vargas administration found itself beset with both economic and political difficulties and constitutional government was suspended and a dictatorship set up pending revision of the constitution and the electoral laws. The greatest change was made in the latter, the new law providing for compulsory voting by eligible males over 18 and for voluntary voting by women.

By 1932 the Vargas regime had become widely unpopular, many of its former supporters having become bitter opponents, with sporadic revolutionary uprisings occurring throughout the country. Failure to restore constitutional government finally brought a sustained revolt, with the rebels having 50,000 well-armed men in the field. The revolt was crushed after three months of fighting, more troops having been at war than at any time in the history of the New World, with the exception of the Civil War period in North America.

Not until 1934 was a new constitution promulgated, the basic law adopted being liberal to native workers and rigorous to foreign interests. A maximum working week of six days of eight hours each is provided; wage discrimination because of age, sex or marital status forbidden; and it is specified that "the economic order must be organized in accordance with the principles of justice and the requirements of national life, safeguarding for all a dignified life." Because of this clause the new Brazilian constitution is often referred to as the "new deal of Brazil."

Reports from Rio de Janeiro indicate that the existence of the widespread socialist-communist plot has been known to the federal government for some months, and it is apparent that it has been allowed to proceed in the evident confidence that when the outbreak came it could be quelled and the known leaders eliminated from further trouble-making activities.

NO NATIONAL JAG

Federal government statistics bearing on the consumption of liquor in the United States now, as compared to the amount used before the prohibition era, reveal that the country has signally failed to go on the "national jag" dolorously predicted by die-hard dries when the eighteenth amendment was repealed.

Taking the year 1917 for use in comparing pre-prohibition and post-prohibition drinking, the statistics reveal that the withdrawal of tax-paid liquors from distilleries is now at the rate of 107,172 gallons per year, while it reached 164,294,000 18 years ago.

The fact that gin is the only alcoholic beverage running in consumption as compared with the years before prohibition, is an encouraging indication that Americans are getting away from the use of "hard liquors" and consuming more of the lighter and less intoxicating mixed drinks of which gin forms the base.

Coincident with the statistical statement of the treasury department comes the announcement by the public health service that deaths from alcoholism for the whole country during 1934 amounted to 3,655, an increase of 258 over the previous year. As against this increase of less than 10 per cent for the entire country, the five remaining "dry" states—those which have not repealed their state prohibition laws—show increases of from 40 to 50 per cent.

Georgia's death from acute alcoholism last year are listed at 76, an increase from 50 in 1933. Thus the casualties from liquor drinking have kept pace with the actual increase in consumption, which is vouched for by both federal and local enforcement agencies and is reflected in the tremendous growth in the number of arrests for drunkenness in both rural and urban sections.

It was to be expected that there would be a temporary and abnormal increase in drinking throughout the country with the repeal of the bone-dry laws, and the fact that consumption has failed by at least a third to reach the totals of pre-prohibition years is an augury that with the perfection of the various control laws in the various states, many of which are admittedly faulty, drinking will continue to decrease and sound and steady progress to national temperance will be accomplished.

OFFICER JONES' EXAMPLE
The example of Officer Paul E. Jones, 30 years of age, of the Atlanta police force, in reducing his weight a pound a day for 90 days, carries a moral to every man and woman, whatever their avocation, who carelessly ignores the threat of increasing weight.

Three months ago Officer Jones was one of the three heaviest members of the police department, topping the scales at 305 pounds, despite his comparative youth. He carried more than 100 pounds excessive weight—and he was there rendered unfit physically to discharge as he should the duties of a policeman, and his mental processes were slowed down.

Then came the warning of the police committee that the members of the force must maintain physical fitness—and Officer Jones got busy with a rigorous diet and with the exercise he had neglected. Now he has lost 90 pounds, but he has gained physical activity and mental alertness. The gastronomic pleasures he formerly loved so well are mainly things of the past, but, all in all, he is enjoying life more, and he is once more certain of keeping his job.

Just as Officer Jones is better equipped to perform his duties in safeguarding the peace and order of the community, so could every man and woman in Atlanta who is overweight follow their chosen paths more intelligently and with less effort if the handicap of bulging fat is removed.

So to those of expanding waistlines, and even those who are prone to consider themselves "stylishly stout," although knowing full well there is no such condition, The Constitution commends Officer Jones and his lost 90 pounds.

Beer in tins merely adds to the traditional confusion in the American icebox. What seems a flat beer may be only canned consommé.

Mr. Roosevelt is averse to letting Uncle George Norris out of the senate. It's bad when even one's well-wishers won't push a parole.

World's Window

BY PIERRE VAN PASSEN

Italians Will Advance.
ADDIS ABABA.—Everything points to a new Italian advance soon. Reinforcements have arrived and scout planes are reconnoitering the roads ahead daily. The objective seems to be Male, 80 kilometers north from where these lines are written. I doubt whether the Ethiopians will defend the place. They will not engage the gross of their forces, but seek to harass the enemy by sending flying columns against his rear guard and against his lines of communication. The longer the lines of communication become, the more hazardous the Italian penetration. The tactics of the Ethiopians is to let the invader advance a good hundred kilometers into the country before they will launch a counter-attack, but in the meantime they will make life miserable for him.

But What Is the Use?

I am told by military observers who have just come from the front that Britain is decided not to let Italy occupy northern Ethiopia indefinitely. At a given moment, say, Britain will force Mussolini to retreat, either by a blockade of the Italian coast or by a blockade of the coast of Eritrea. I figure that if foreign military observers know that much about the secret intentions of the British government, Mussolini must know also. If he knows, what is the use of marching into north Ethiopia? What purpose can be served by the slaughter of millions of men and little children? Just to improve the Ethiopians with Italy's grandeur and might? A queer way of showing superiority. When the Ethiopians look how perfectly equipped the Italian army is and how poorly the Ethiopians, I am not impressed at all. It is like saying that the Blue Ribband Express between Chicago and New York is superior to a cyclist.

When Will Peace Come?

Let Italy advance a piece into Ethiopia and conquer a province or two and you will see Mussolini beginning to negotiate for peace. That was the argument you could use in the French side especially, before this war started. Now Mussolini has advanced and has won some signal victories, he is generally believed, but he shows no inclinations to negotiate. No, the truth is the deeper Italy gets into Ethiopia the more difficult will be the job of opening negotiations. The Ethiopians are now only beginning to arrive at the front. Who is going to tell them to stop fighting? It is argued that the Italian withdrawal, and the Ethiopians, what about them? Do you think those hordes of warriors, who are getting new rifles and machine guns, are going to go back home without having measured themselves with the foe? No, there will be some gruesome fighting yet. Peace will not come till next spring's rainy season, when the fighting will be no advance. That's the time for negotiations. What Mussolini has gained by this may he may find England doesn't object. After Italy, Spain, Italy will have the financial means to pursue this war. Only three states can, if they wish, afford to fight colonial wars: Britain, the U. S. A. and France. Italy is too poor for that kind of thing.

TODAY'S YESTERDAYS.

November 27, 1247—Traditional date of the death of 87 of the legendary Earl of Huntingdon, alias Robin Hood. A treacherous woman relative is supposed to have killed him. His grave is pointed out near Huddlesfield, Yorkshire, England.

300 Years Ago Today—Francoise D'Aubigne was born in a prison. She was one of the most extraordinary women in history. Plain, poor and without prospects until she was 45, she became at 52 the wife of 48-year-old Louis XIV, France's most powerful ruler. As his wife she played a dominant part in the affairs of France until, wearied by "high society," she retired to establish a girls' school.

November 27, 1746—Robert R. Livingston was born in New York City. He was one of the five men who drafted the Declaration of Independence; he gave George Washington the presidential oath of office; he was Napoleon's favorite among all the envoys to the French court; he was the Louisiana purchase; he was the co-inventor of Robert Fulton's steamboat, the man who introduced large scale scientific farming in America, and the founder of the American Academy of Fine Arts. Yet he is not in America's Hall of Fame, while such as William Ellery Channing, John Greenleaf Whittier, Elias Howe, Charlotte Cushman and Edwin Booth are. Such is fame.

50 Years Ago Today—Stars fell over Mexico. The Biela comet, which had returned periodically every 6 years and 270 days since its discovery in 1826, exploded in a shower of meteors that rained down on the Marzapl region. No one was killed, and only one fragment of it was ever found!

Misinterpreted.

The electricians were making some repairs on the local school. School Boy: What are you doing mister?
Electrician: Installing an electric switch.
Boy: Well, I don't care. Our family is moving today, and I won't be going to this school any more.

Forged Writing.

Thomas Chatterton was born in 1752 in Bristol, England, three months after his father died. A child in 200 is posthumously paternally.

He began writing notable poetry at 10, and in his teens fooled experts. His works he forged in the style of ancient writers. His frauds today are worth more than many authentic classics by the poets and authors whose names he used!

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

BALLOONING WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—It may now appear that boom balloons from Washington on. Official statements lately have exuded a fragrance which may seem to be faintly similar to the sweet-scented hand-odors of 1929.

First, Chairman Landis, of SEC, said publicly there was nothing he could do about stock prices going up and up. Then Governor Eccles, of FRB, stepped out with an announcement which was headlined in New York: "Eccles Holds Hands Off in Stock Boom." The new monthly FRB bulletin announced, a few days later, there was strength in the existing market situation. The A. F. of L. tagged along simultaneously with a prophecy of "an industrial boom within the next few years," which apparently left it a few years behind.

The only depressing note in all this encouragement was the warning of President Gay, of the stock exchange. At the time of the Landis statement, he went on record as bemoaning the possibilities of a stock market boom.

If you will add all these things up, as most people are doing, you will most assuredly get the wrong answer. The other side of these boom balloons may not be visible to the naked eye, but there is another side.

MANICURING It is discernible most clearly in the facts behind the Eccles statement. His remarks may have been subject to the interpretation that the Federal Reserve Board has decided to keep its hands off. But he neglected to point out clearly that the board at least is having its hands manicured in preparation.

For instance, everyone but bankers may have forgotten that the Federal Reserve Board has never issued regulation "U." This would be the regulation setting forth margin loan requirements for banks. Regulation "U" imposes restrictions on brokers, so they can lend no more than 55 per cent on most stocks. But a soft-hearted banker can lend as much as his heart will let him.

Bank loans on securities are not sufficiently heavy to warrant apprehension, but there are good reasons for suspecting that regulation "U" will be issued anyway before long.

NAILS When this regulation is issued, the board can proceed thereafter at any time to stiffen margin requirements on both banks and brokers. Also it can, any one of these days, increase reserve requirements of member banks. Further than that there is probably nothing effective which can be done about excess reserves.

These cautious deterrents are all understood to have been discussed at the meeting of FRB officials here last week, but no announcement was made about it. If one had been, the effect would have been opposite from that of Governor Eccles' statement.

DILEMMA The basic situation behind all this is that the financial authorities of the New Deal are agreed that the current market and business trend is up. They like it. They have convinced themselves that it is on a firm foundation. They do not want to do anything to stop it. Nor do they want to lay themselves open to misinterpretations of booming it.

This requires a lot of tight-wire walking, in which there are bound to be occasional slips on both sides of the wire. So far, the New Dealers have favored the boom side.

Also hanging over them is the fact that they will have to act, sooner or later. They probably could have started acting this week without any important reaction. It is true that the market has not increased during the recent market rise. But, after all, they do amount to a billion dollars. Also there is no excellent reason why banks should be permitted to lend more on margin than brokers, although the importance of that situation also is yet to be felt.

Basically, it will be easier to take any restrictive steps now. Political pressure will be heavy next year.

PERSONALITY

It may be hard to believe, but it is apparently true, that Governor Eccles spoke out, and got himself misinterpreted, because he thought some confusion existed about the board's powers. Apparently he was nervous by some criticism he heard at the American bankers' convention. He is a straightforward and sensitive man. He thought he would clear everything up.

BUSINESS

The firmness in the industrial situation is not being overplayed by all the uplift statements you are reading currently. It is not new. It is just getting to be official.

There have been three business improvements since the depths of the depression. The first was in the summer of 1933, before the NRA started. This was an artificial flurry based only on the activity of industrialists who wanted to get out of the cheap production before the depression. The second flurry was in the spring of 1934, when it also was confined to special lines of activity. The third started early in 1934 and has been going on in particular lines. There was a recession last summer, but it did not even get back to the top peak of the 1934 high point of industrial production.

If this is not the real thing, at least it is fooling every economist in town.

OMEN? A few good labor insiders here suspect the resignation of John L. Lewis is another omen, the beginning of the end of the existing A. F. of L. organization set-up. What leads them to such an extreme suspicion is that Lewis is very close to the New Deal, while most of the officials he left on the A. F. of L. executive board are not. They think he will be able to use the powerful sympathies of the administration in his technical fight for reunification.

His resignation does not mean that he is going to set up a competitive organization. He will continue to fight within the A. F. of L. The resignation was merely a dramatic gesture to help his fight along.

SPENDTHRIFT? Mr. Hopkins, the great spender, is understood to be having his troubles paying some of his bills. Half a dozen photographic agencies here have not been able to collect for publicity picture work, some of which dated back last April and beyond. (Red tape and Comptroller-General McCall are supposed to be responsible.)

Among the items yet unpaid is one of 12 elegant portraits of Mr. Hopkins himself.

SILHOUETTES

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Sing a song of harvest home,
They're bringing in the sheaves;
It's mighty hard to write a poem,
While raking up the leaves.

I clean my lawn with might and main,
And when I turn around,
The wind has strewn 'em out again,
Re-littering the ground.

There may be beauty in the leaves,
But, gosh, they make a muss,
They're just one of my annual peevish,
When Nature makes me cuss!

Dangers on The Highway.
Recently I've been driving in school Georgia and there are a couple of highway notations that should be brought to the attention of the road department. Hope some of them may be of use to you.

First of all there is that stretch of federal highway number one between Lyons and Baxley. Something should be done about it.

Came along it last Wednesday during a light shower and the wet paving, literally, as slick as ice. They told me that with every rain one or new wet paint they had scattered over the road is that all don't slide off the road.

We crawled along for 40 miles at about 35 miles an hour and even at that speed could feel the car skidding every few yards. And my tires are not worn particularly smooth.

FARENOUGH HEALTH TALKS

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Spain's Immunity. MADRID.—Preoccupied with political and economic troubles, the Spanish republic enjoys a strange immunity to the worries and rumors which beset the stronger nations of Europe. When the Spanish republic rattle the world, which he mentions in such awesome tones, he is not rattling a terrible blade at Spain. When Mussolini beats his chest and pops his eyeballs at a patriotic camp meeting he is threatening Britain or possibly France, but not Spain.

Thanks to the United States, Spain has no necessity either to defend a group of indefensible islands in the far Pacific or to haul down her flag and turn the islands loose so as to avoid an otherwise inevitable fight to keep them. That was attended to in 1898. There's one virtue at least in being a poor and struggling republic isolated from the rest of the European continent without any colonies that anybody wants and without sufficient military and naval strength to start a war.

Her weakness is her strength, for the rest of the world leaves Spain alone, whereas Britain with her great and scattered empire is always squeezing out of one crisis into another because the world can hardly take a deep breath without threatening some British interest somewhere.

Squat and Watch. Certainly the Spaniards have had all the experience which comes with opulence and a people's poverty and defeat in the course of the full life of a nation. They have conquered and been conquered, and now in what seems to be the twilight of a colorful career they squat in their peninsula, mature and mellow, watching the rest of the world whip itself into a bloody fury and another great war.

Of course, they see nothing enviable in their status, no more than the poor Spaniards who consider the rich man's worries. Yet down at Gibraltar, a speck of London on the Spanish mainland, the British are compelled to pay the constant expense of maintaining a large and powerful navy for the maintenance of their enormous fleet which maintains their enormous empire.

Gibraltar Spaniards are aware that Gibraltar is Spain and that it was lost only because the British slugged the night watchman and took it. Yet to keep the rock today Spain would have to spend a fortune in maintaining it and put in her time saluting and polishing buttons. For what?

Is an unemployed English miner any happier in poverty than an unemployed Spanish miner? Is an English aristocrat, with his honors and orders strung out after his name like the tail of a kite and with taxes amounting to 30 per cent of his income, any better off than an upper class Spaniard who lives on the fat of his native land and acknowledges no social equal on earth?

Spain is not a country to it any more. Their soldiers are underpaid, and their warships need not only paint but scrubbing. Spain is not a country to it any more. Their soldiers are underpaid, and their warships need not only paint but scrubbing.

No Need To Worry. Who would bomb Spain, and what would the Great Powers do to any nation which spent money on defense? It's the French and British who are worried about the defense of their capitals, railroads, harbors and factories against bombers from the air. They are both afraid of the Germans and to a smaller degree afraid of each other, but Spain does not figure in their fears or plans of offense or defense.

Down in Gibraltar the British on their stolen rock have been holding air raid and gas defense drills on the off chance that the Italians might bomb them or send their planes into the Mediterranean to defend that great aggregation of headcases—the empire. But in Algeria, just 26 cents away by ferry, the Spaniards are under no such necessity.

Abraham Lincoln Mussolini's mission to free the slaves of Abyssinia did not threaten Spain's empire because she has no empire. She has though most of her fleet is always in the Mediterranean Mussolini hardly knows it's there.

Of course, Spain is a special case, governed by special conditions, important among them being the jealousy of richer nations. Military and economic weakness can hardly be taken as a secret of security for all nations. But here is a country which can go to sleep at night without locking the doors, not because her neighbors are honest but because they are too dishonest ever to agree on a division of loot if they should take the country as the British took Gibraltar.

Talmudic Tales

PATIENCE REWARDED.
Noah and his three sons were kept so busy while in the ark that they had little rest because of the demands of the animals. Some required one kind of food, while others required other kinds. Then again some had to be fed by day while others had to be fed by night.

Especially was Noah worried about the little zitzka, which refused altogether to take any food. Upon opening a pomegranate one day, Noah noticed a little worm crawling out and immediately the zitzka pounced upon it and devoured it hungrily.

Noah was happy to learn the kind of food that appealed to the zitzka and from then on he saved all fruits and vegetables that had worms in them for the zitzka.

There was a constant hubbub and noise in the ark caused by the animals clamoring for food, but Noah had little rest because of the demands of the animals. Some required one kind of food, while others required other kinds. Then again some had to be fed by day while others had to be fed by night.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.

(Copyright, 1935, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)
HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 26.—Newcomers from the New York stage have been creating a sensation in Hollywood. New York is making good in this village in a big way. Watch Humphrey Bogart, who will play the bad man in "The Petrified Forest"—I think he's due for an exceptional Hollywood success.

Now the role of Duke Mantey in "The Petrified Forest" is what is known as a "natural" in these parts. He's a bad man with a feeling for life. A gangster with a heart you would not expect. He's a twisted soul. Eddie Robinson was offered the role and refused it. . . . perhaps because a name like Leslie Howard was in the cast. In refusing the role Robinson made a great mistake because the bad man bids fair to take the picture over, his part being what it is and Leslie Howard's part being one of those subtle, understated characterizations which the English actor loves.

Humphrey Bogart sat across the table from me at a dinner which Louise Atwill gave for her brother, James Cromwell. I didn't know who this new actor was—I didn't catch the name—and I wondered where the unknown fellow would be several days' growth of beard could be.

Let us on the Warner Brothers' lot. I met Humphrey Bogart. "Why you're the man with the beard that was at the Atwill dinner," I said brightly.

Sure, you kept crying me as if I were a burglar. I said brightly.

"My mistake," said I, "an old Hollywood should have known that three days' growth of beard meant a part in 'The Petrified Forest'."

Bogart, three handsome, more Mantee in the Broadway production. Bette Davis plays the role in which Peggy Conklin made such a success with the Broadway performance.

When Gertrude Michael was in the desert on location for "Woman Trap" she heard a gay serenade going on beneath her window. So she invited her serenaders in to have some cheer. They accepted. When they ushered into her drawing room they turned out to be three desert rats—one 60 years old and proud of it, the second 65 but not so proud, and the third . . . well he had to be helped to a chair.

"That's a Palm Springs serenade," said Miss Michael as she told me the story.

COTTON INCOME GAIN REPORTED IN FAYETTE

Wide Difference in Fund Received in 1935 Compared With 1932.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ga., Nov. 26.—(AP)—County Agent E. L. England said today Fayette county farmers produced the same number of bales of cotton in 1935 as in 1932, but estimated the net income from the crop would be more than five times as great.

An official government estimate, he said, has placed the value of the 6,900 bales produced in 1935 at $551,800, as compared with only $278,442 in 1932.

He added that recent studies in the high school here indicated the 1935 profit for each bale should be placed at $85.20, at current prices of lint and seed, while in 1932 the profit was only $7.

On this basis, he said, the county had a net income of $238,180 in 1935, as compared with $48,300 in 1932.

A valuation of $525,857.50 was placed on the 1934 crop and $534,150.70 on that of 1935.

The largest crops of corn, wheat, hay and vegetables in many years were produced in 1935 and farmers are practicing a system of rotation between "rented" acres and cultivated acres.

The acreage planted to soil building crops has increased several hundred per cent since the adjustment program has been in effect, he declared.

Approximately 2,000 acres of land have been trenched during the past year in Fayette county with machinery purchased co-operatively. This is to prevent soil erosion.

Giant Glass Disc for Telescope Ends Year's Cooling, Found Perfect

200-Inch "Eye" Still Requires Half Decade of Polishing and Grinding; Man's Astronomical Vision To Reach Four Times Farther.

CORNING, N. Y., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Successful completion of the 200-inch glass eye for the world's largest telescope, announced today at the Corning Glass Works, means that in about five years man will see four times farther into space than ever before.

Astronomers will see what may exist in regions about 1,200,000,000 (one billion two hundred million) light years away—areas of the sky so remote that their light takes that long to reach the earth, and which may be seen, five years hence, as they looked more than a billion years ago, or long before any known life existed on earth.

Today's event finishes the most critical and difficult step in making this telescope, which will be twice the size of any now in the world. Five years is a conservative estimate of the time needed to grind and polish the big glass into a mirror and set it up in a telescope on the Palomar mountain, about 75 miles south of Los Angeles.

The huge glass disc 17 feet in diameter and more than two feet thick was poured last December 2, molten glass about a third the temperature of the sun's surface. It has been cooling ever since in an iron annealing oven.

It is still there, awaiting an official "party" for its removal in about two weeks.

But meanwhile, it was revealed today, the Corning Glass Works scientists who crawled on hands and knees a few days ago into the now cool oven and back and forth across the still warm surface of the glass.

They could have seen major faults if any, and found none. Polarized light from hand flashes would show without waiting removal whether the texture of the glass was free from strains.

The creeping inspection was made by Dr. J. C. Hostetter, director of development and research, and Dr. George V. McCauley, physicist in charge of disc making. The latter supervised the almost year-long annealing, the slow cooling of little more than a degree a day which assured freedom from the dreaded "strains."

Although the Corning Glass Works took less than a year to make this disc, the task of operating it began seven years ago, in 1928. Because nothing like it ever was done before, experiments preceded the casting of the great "eye."

Barely more than two years ago the astronomer in charge of experiments decided on a new kind of pyrex borosilicate glass to be made at the Corning Works. The first 200-inch disc was cast in this material in March, 1933.

That first mirror was a success, but accidents to its mold produced a disc which would have required so much grinding that the scientists decided to try for a more perfect one, the "eye" now completed.

In this they repeated astronomical history. Four discs were poured for the 100-inch mirror, which is the eye of the world's present largest telescope, on Mt. Wilson, California.

Fuzzless Peach Fails To Excite Georgians
MACON, Ga., Nov. 26.—(AP)—Reports today of development of a fuzzless peach in Virginia left Georgia growers unperturbed.

Even when they learned the new fruit resembles the famous Georgia Belle—a White Freestone—the peach men refused to be excited.

Georgians, they explained, grow their peaches with the fuzz—good and thick—and then use machines that take it off in the least.

W. D. Lamar, a leading grower here, has a peach he has copyrighted under the name "Fuzz-Less Brand" which he has marketed for several years.

W. C. Bewley, secretary-manager of the Georgia Peach Growers' Exchange, commented:

"A new peach that has been developed merely because it lacks fuzz would have little chance as a commercial product unless it also combined features which make our well-established varieties."

MRS. SAYLOR ON STAND AT TRIAL OF HER SON

Story of Mother's Love for Slain Son, Unfolded in Court.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Nov. 26.—A story of a mother's love for her murdered son, and of resentment toward a living son who killed her only mainstay, was unfolded here this afternoon as Mrs. Addie P. Saylor took the witness stand at the trial in which the state is demanding the death penalty for Preston Saylor.

Preston shot and killed his brother, Harry, at the family's ancestral home on the morning of Tuesday, November 5.

The mother, asked if she believed Preston was insane at the time of the killing, replied, "Certainly not, I knew what he was doing, for he had told me only a day or two before that Harry's time was not far off."

The mother revealed that the family fortune had dwindled until she found her estate involved to the extent of more than $10,000. Preston, she said, was unable to finance it, and while in a few weeks after he was shot, was in jail for shooting at the neighbor, and the mother and brother agreed for Preston to go to the asylum at Milledgeville, rather than stand trial for the shooting.

Preston Angered. This action on the part angered Preston, the mother told the jury, and appeared again at their farm, at the homestead, vowing vengeance upon Harry. The mother related to the jury how she had pleaded with him not to shoot Harry, "You may shoot me, or do anything else you want to, to me, but Preston, please don't harm Harry—he is my only reliance now."

On the morning of the fatal shooting, the mother continued, Preston appeared again at their farm, and was apparently in good humor. Harry left him standing in the yard, went up stairs and started to shave. Suddenly, said the mother, Preston darted up the stairs and "before I could stop him, Preston had fired several shots in the direction of Harry. I followed and when I reached the top flight both boys were on the floor. Preston on top of Harry beating and choking him after he had shot him. I called for help and finally pulled Preston off, and then tried to do something for Harry who told me, 'Mamma, he's killed me.'"

Her testimony was replete with stories of selling the family heirloom silver and china sets, or two at a time when it became necessary to raise money in emergencies which arose more frequently with the passing years, the last time when Harry was placed at public sale and Harry bought it and refinanced it through a governmental agency.

It was bitter resentment over this action which caused Preston to follow up his brother, threaten him and finally kill him, the state contends.

The first witness this afternoon was Ed Kexco, who said he had known the family for 25 years. He testified Preston in 1933 shot a man named Fowler and pretended insanity and that he was placed in the state sanitarium. Kexco said Preston told him much of the money he had made as a pugilist went back into the home place.

Other witnesses included Bill Culbertson, a tenant on the Saylor farm, who said Preston was in charge of the farm until he took up prize fighting and that since that time Harry had been in charge. Another tenant, Luther Payne, testified that Preston shot three times at Harry a month prior to the killing.

Ross Maddox, 19-year-old youth, testified that on the morning of the slaying, the two brothers argued over the use of a truck and that when Harry went into the house, Preston followed him. He said he heard shots and that he and George Nations, who had been milking, entered the room where the shooting took place, and lifted Harry onto a couch, the mother, also being present.

State Resists. Mrs. Saylor was the last witness to testify today before the state rested and court adjourned until tomorrow morning. The defense has summoned about 60 witnesses.

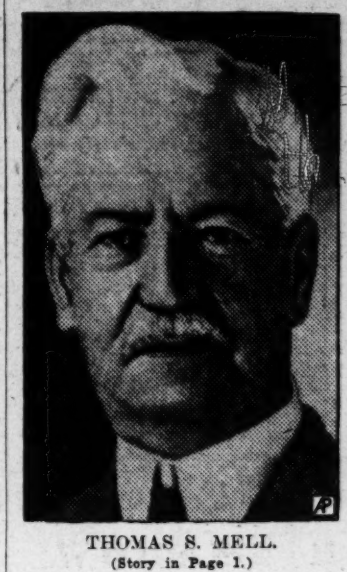

It is thought the case may go to the jury late tomorrow or Thursday.

The trial of Saylor opened this morning after a commission of local physicians reported that they found Preston Saylor sane.

The defense counsel moved for a continuance on the ground that they had insufficient time in which to prepare the case. Judge Pittman ordered the trial to proceed and a plea of not guilty was entered for Preston by J. R. Whitaker, one of the court-appointed defense attorneys.

John Mitchell, solicitor-general, and E. Noel, assistant solicitor, is conducting the case for the state.

INSTALLMENT XXXI.

Jane Lee was furious. But she was afraid the old maid meant what she said. So she sent Liner back to tell her to come to her room.

The sullen blonde was propped up on a numberless pillows, resplendent in lemon-colored negligee. But she was not her usual pale self. Two spots of color burned in her hollow cheeks. She motioned Miss Friddle to a chair with a nod. The old lady sat down and clinked her hands in her lap.

"Say what you have to say, Miss Friddle," Jane Lee began impatiently, "and get it over with. But I won't do you any good. I believe Sugar took that money. She must be punished for it. At least she knows where her boy friend Johnny is, and she won't tell."

Mother's face was the color of chalk. For several seconds she measured Jane Lee with studied deliberation, and the blonde squirmed uncomfortably. Finally Mother shook her head sadly.

"Jane Lee, the Masters," she said slowly, "I wouldn't be in your place right this minute for all the money in the world. And when I tell you what I came here to tell you, you are going to wish you were dead."

Something in the somber tones of the old maid sent a sudden fear to Jane Lee's heart, but she laughed nervously.

"Let's not be dramatic now, Miss Friddle. I know you are fond of the girl. But after all I have my interests to look after, too."

Mother nodded pitifully.

"You are going to hear me through. And you are going to answer every question I put to you. If you do, you may learn something that will be the greatest shock you have ever had. I beg of you not to take me lightly, or you'll be sorry to the longest day you live on this earth."

For a few seconds Jane Lee stared back at Mother Friddle as though she thought her mind might be rambling. Then she settled back on the cushions and nodded calmly.

"If you wish to ask me some questions, do so. If I think they are any of your affair, I'll answer. If not, you must excuse me. I'm very tired and upset."

Mother sat forward in her chair, and put her thin old hands on the arms for support. She began with a painful slowness.

"On September the fourth, 1916, you were married to Dale Peters, whom I had taken in at the orphanage when he was a baby."

"He was killed in action at Chateau Thierry. You almost lost your life when your baby was born, because your father did not want it known, and would have no one but the practical nurse in attendance."

Jane Lee was a crumpled little heap in her bed. Mother Friddle's tender heart went out in deepest pity at her suffering. No matter how hard she had seemed, and how much Mother had thought she despised her for her inhumanity toward Sugar, she could not steel herself against Jane Lee's suffering any longer. She went over and sat on the edge of the bed, to pat her shoulder.

"There, there, she soothed tenderly. "You must be like this. I know it's cruel to bring it all back."

She waited until Mrs. Le Masters raised her head and dried her eyes.

"Who told you all this?" Jane asked then, dully.

"Your father," Mother Friddle turned away and wiped her own eyes. "He sent for me a few months ago, just before he died, and unburdened his heart."

"But—how does it concern you?"

"That's the hardest part of my story to tell," Mother's old shoulders sagged with her burden. "I hardly know how to go on."

"Please—do," Jane Lee straight-

"I—how did you know?" All the color left Jane Lee's face. "And what has this to do with anything that concerns me now?"

"Everything," Miss Friddle wet her lips and went out. "You eloped and were married in Rossmore. Dale was 18 and you were 17. There was only one person in the world you felt you could trust with your story. Your Uncle Zeb. You knew your father would disinherit you and send you away from his home forever if he found out."

"You went to your Uncle Zeb and gave your husband a job in his bank. After that you saw Dale secretly whenever you got a chance. On June 17, 1917, you gave birth to a little daughter."

Jane Lee let out a cry, and covered her face with her hands.

"Don't—please, don't tell me any more. How did you know?"

"I know a great deal more than that. And you must listen. It was just a few weeks before the birth of your daughter that your father and mother learned your secret. It was when you came back from a visit to Virginia Beach."

"There was a dreadful scene when your father found out you had married a penniless orphan. And he sent you out to his tobacco farm in the hills under the guard of a practical nurse by the name of Hazel Simms."

"I know, I know," Jane Lee broke in. "You don't have to tell me about it."

"But I do," mother interrupted her, as she more fully became the recalling of her young love had released a flood of tears.

"Your father cut off all communication between you and Dale. That same week the safe at the bank was robbed of $25,000. They caught your husband in Richmond and brought him back. But neither your uncle nor your father wanted your foolish marriage to a bank robber to become known. So they gave Dale his choice of enlisting in the army and going to fight in France, or spending the rest of his life in jail. He went to France."

Jane Lee's sob were so violent that Miss Friddle waited a few seconds before she continued. When the younger woman quieted she began again.

"He was killed in action at Chateau Thierry. You almost lost your life when your baby was born, because your father did not want it known, and would have no one but the practical nurse in attendance."

Jane Lee was a crumpled little heap in her bed. Mother Friddle's tender heart went out in deepest pity at her suffering. "But—how does it concern you?"

"That's the hardest part of my story to tell," Mother's old shoulders sagged with her burden. "I hardly know how to go on."

"Please—do," Jane Lee straight-

Mother went on with a supreme effort.

"Your father's last words to me were the plea that I would find some way to tell you, and undo the terrible wrong he had done. All these months I have prayed and waited. And it seemed, suddenly, that providence had shown me the way."

She stopped and her hands trembled violently as she wiped the tears from her eyes.

"Jane Lee," she turned waxen in spite of her tears. "Your baby did not die. Your father paid Mrs. Simms a large sum of money and cancelled a mortgage he held on her home to keep his secret."

The younger woman raised in her bed slowly. Her eyes grew wide with horror at the import of the old maid's words.

"No, oh, no—," she said in a dazed whisper. "He wouldn't do that—my father!"

"Yes, my child," mother nodded pityingly. "He did. You must believe me. For the last month I have been searching for Hazel Simms through a private detective agency. She went to Atlanta and had a wire last evening that they are bringing her here today to tell her story."

Jane Lee seemed to shrink. For several seconds the ticking of the little boudoir clock beside Mrs. Le Masters' bed was the only sound in the room.

Finally Jane Lee asked dully, "And my baby? What did he do with it?"

"They brought it to me," Mother drew nearer and took the younger woman in her arms. "Your child is—Sugar Friddle."

With a wild scream Jane Lee fell back among the pillows, in a death-like faint.

Mother Friddle ran into the bathroom and shut a glass door water. Then she raised Jane Lee gently and forced a few drops between her lips.

The brown eyes fluttered and the old lady hurried into the bathroom and brought back a damp cloth to lay on her head. She felt Jane Lee's pulse and knew it was just a temporary fainting spell. In a few seconds Jane's eyes opened and Mother said anxiously, "Don't try to get up. You've had a shock. Rest awhile, dear."

Jane Lee made an attempt to rise. Miss Friddle pushed her back gently.

"Not yet. Is there something you want me to do?"

"Go—and get the girl," Jane Lee said with an effort, and closed her eyes wearily. "Leave me alone. I don't want anybody. I'll stay here."

"I'll be back in a little while—with your daughter," Mother bent over and smoothed Mrs. Le Masters' hot brow. "I'll try to make her understand."

In front of the house the old maid met Jim Carter. She was amazed at the stock in his usually sunny face. He grabbed her arm.

"Have you been up to see Jane Lee about Sugar?" he demanded.

"I have," Mother nodded, puzzled at his manner. "You just leave it to me. Sugar will be out in a few minutes. Where were you going?"

Cart granted savagely.

"I'm going to tell Jane Lee just what I think of her. Then I'm going to pack up and move to the hotel."

MOROCCO

DOES NOT COME FROM MOROCCO

Many people believe that morocco leather is made from the hides of some animal peculiar to that country. Most morocco leather is made of nothing more unusual than ordinary goat skins, and, sometimes, sheep skins. The special process by which these hides are tanned is said to have originated with the Moors. These hides are tanned and dried on the grain side (outside), and are especially fine leather. Goat skins are said to make the best Morocco leather, but sheep skins are cheaper and are often used. Genuine morocco leather is very flexible and firm.

A man in Somaliland.

January to April. Other months of the year are marked by rains, heavy or light.

Plains covered with tall, coarse grass are common, and there are great areas of thorn-bush and jungle sound-

try. Lions, leopards, panthers, foxes, badgers, wild dogs, elephants and giraffes are among the animals. In one part there are black rhinos, along with zebras.

There are many kinds of antelopes, including the hartbeest, the waterbuck, the bushbuck, the dikdik, the dero and the dikdik. (Some of those names sound a bit fancy.)

Jumping shrews, baboons, tree monkeys, wart hogs and crocodiles give us further reason to feel that we are in a rather wild jungle country when we visit Somaliland. The southern end of the Italian section is cut by the equator.

Close to one and a half million people live in Somaliland, but only a few thousand of them are whites. The great bulk of the dark-skinned Somalis.

Some Somali tribesmen live in villages along the seacoast, but most of them are nomads. They move from place to place, in search of grasslands for their cattle, sheep and ponies. Their food is chiefly meat and milk.

Somali folk are classed as members of the Hamite race, but there have been strong mixtures of Arab and negro stock. The men are strong, active and fairly tall. In Italian Somaliland, many of them were put into service as soldiers to help carry on the warfare against Ethiopia.

TUGWELL PLANS TO AID SOUTHERN TENANTS

Removal of 1,000 Farmers to Small Tracts Is Aim of Official.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—An attack on the south's farm tenant problem, involving removal of 1,000 tenants onto small farms of their own, was revealed today by Rexford G. Tugwell.

The chief of the Resettlement Administration reported the trial "cases" would be chosen from four parts of the south for purposes of the plan. The experiment, he said, should be an indication of what can be done in a national way to solve the tenant problem.

He added, in an interview, that he expected to have this and other wide segments of the resettlement plan under way by the time next year's crops have been planted.

"It has always been our intention," Tugwell said, "to have the resettlement work function of the Department of Agriculture. It obviously is a part of agricultural adjustment, and it has to do almost exclusively with farmers."

"We have been studying the proposed Bankhead-Jones farm tenant bill, which was designed to enable tenants to become landowners. We find that in a small way, what this bill intends. What we will do will come under the classification of our resettlement and rehabilitation work."

Georgia To Get Aid. North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and the area embracing the point where boundaries of Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana touch have been designated for the selection of specific sections for the tenant trial.

The plan calls for the administration to buy land and resell it to the tenants under a long-term agreement. The agreement, Tugwell said, probably would run not more than 40 years. In some cases, tenants would be sold the land they now are cultivating. In others, they might be given an opportunity to move to some new farm.

Farms sold to the tenants would remain under supervision of extension service and resettlement officials during the period of the loans, and administrative help would be expected to assist the tenants to gain a self-supporting basis.

Objections Raised. Objections have been made to the Bankhead-Jones plan, it was said, on grounds that tenants would be saddled with a long-term debt. This measure would set up a $500,000,000 fund for long-term loans to finance farm purchases by tenants.

"A careful investigation has shown," Tugwell said concerning this point, "that the interest the tenant now pays as a tenant to finance a crop would be sufficient to repay both the government loan and the interest."

"The tenants who would become landowners would continue to raise the cash crop they have been raising. We would hope, of course, through supervision, to change or improve farming practices where necessary."

The 1,000 tenants to be selected now, Tugwell said, would be selected on the basis of each in the various areas.

TWO GEORGIANS DIE OF AUTO INJURIES

Week-End Crashes Fatal to Augustan and West Point Man.

Week-end accidents were fatal yesterday to two Georgians who died of injuries received in automobile crashes.

Bedford, one of five Augustans injured in an automobile-train crash at Allendale, S. C., Sunday night, died in a hospital at Augusta yesterday.

Bedford, his wife, Miss Annie May O'Connell, Miss Anita Brittingham and Miss Mary Lou Shirley, were hurt in the accident.

Miss O'Connell is secretary to the city engineer at Augusta and Miss Shirley is a pianist. Mrs. Bedford and Miss Shirley were reported seriously injured.

Edwin Huguley, 53, prominent planter of near West Point, succumbed late Monday to injuries received Saturday night. Mr. Huguley died in a Langdale (Ala.) hospital, near West Point. Huguley was a former football star at Alabama Polytechnic Institute (Auburn). He was hurt in a wreck on the way home from the Auburn-Georgia football game at Columbus, Ga., Sunday night. He was held yesterday from West Point Baptist church.

Mr. Huguley is survived by his wife, who was Miss Mary M. Elrod, one of his sisters-in-law, Mrs. E. E. Huguley, of Atlanta, and one nephew, T. Clinton Huguley, of Atlanta.

YOUNG FORGER FLEES FULTON PRISON CAMP

A 25-year-old Atlanta man serving a term for forgery escaped yesterday from the North Side prison camp, it was revealed last night by police.

He is J. B. Tarwater, 151 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E., according to police. He took a hunting suit and a black overcoat from the camp to disguise himself, he said.

Tarwater, according to the police "lookout" description, is five feet five inches tall, weighs about 120 pounds, and has black hair and brown eyes.

HONEA "NOT INSANE," TALMADGE INFORMED

Marvin Honea, condemned Atlanta holdup slayer of David Lord, a FERA worker, is "not insane," a board of physicians yesterday reported to Governor Talmadge following an examination of Honea at Millersville.

The board, appointed last week by the governor, was headed by Dr. Richard Binion, of Millersville. Honea's death sentence has been upheld by the supreme court. The board of physicians has declined to recommend clemency for him. Governor Talmadge is expected to act on his plea for commutation to life imprisonment next week.

Bolstered Gray Devil Eleven Stops Varsity in Long Scrimmage

BREAK O'DAY!
By Ralph McKee

(On Thanksgiving afternoon at Grant field the freshmen football teams of Georgia Tech and Georgia will play a football game for the benefit of the Scottish Rite Crippled Children's hospital. Literally every cent of money paid for the tickets goes direct to the hospital, no expenses being deducted.)

The sun slanted through the riot of colored leaves on the trees above and fell on the warm white roofs and walls of the buildings.

Inside it was time for school. There was no clatter of feet in the halls. No feet ran on playgrounds outside. There was no scuffle of shoes on the steps.

It was quiet, except for the voices of the children awaiting the teachers.

The ward unfolded before one. There sat a girl of six, her face eager, her eyes alive. Beside her were crutches. They lay beside one leg which was in a thick cast, heavy and hard.

"I can go to the table," she said, clutching the crutches.

A nurse helped her to the floor, holding her while the child adjusted her crutches. She took her book in one hand and started forward.

"See," she said, "I can walk."

She alone, of all that ward, went to the table.

The others watched her go with eyes that followed the legs, one thin, the other in its heavy cast. But she was walking. Their eyes followed her legs that moved.

Casts on both legs, casts on backs, held them. Some of them lay flat on their faces. Others could not raise up. But their heads turned, watching the one who could walk to the table.

ONE SAT UP FOR THE FIRST TIME.

There was one who sat up for the first time. He was a youngster of 12.

The manner of his sitting up was this. He was lying on his stomach. He had been there for six months. Yesterday they let him raise himself up from the bed on his elbows and stay there for a moment or so.

It was, in a manner of speaking, an event. For six months he had been flat here in a cast. But yesterday he raised himself up.

There was a red-headed boy there who walked around his bed yesterday. He had not walked in more than a year. He is from a farm in south Georgia.

"You know," he said, his face so cheerful it hurt one inside, "I'd forgot what a pleasure it is to walk. Yes, sir; it's a pleasure."

School was beginning for them. The boy who was flat on his face studied in this manner. He moved until his eyes were over the edge of the bed. And a book was open on a high chair just below his eyes.

Others sat up in bed and held their books and waited. One of them said:

"I'm learning to read a little. I can write some. I ain't never been to school none 'til I come here."

And he grinned about it.

ONE CAME BACK AND STAYED.

There was one who came back and stayed.

There was a Greek word for bone and around it has been built all our words. One of them is osteomyelitis and it means, generally, an infection of the bone.

A year ago a youngster was brought into the hospital on a sheet, too ill and too sensitive to be touched. He would not walk. He went out walking.

Yesterday he came back. Osteomyelitis had struck him again.

"You'll have to stay a while," said the doctor.

"All right," said the boy, grinning. "Can I go home Thanksgiving Day?"

"We'll have turkey here that day," said the doctor.

"All right," said the boy. "Will I be home for Christmas?"

"You'll be home for Christmas."

"All right, I don't mind then."

So, he put on his gown and they took him to the ward.

AND IN THE KITCHEN.

In the kitchen there was Annie Kate. She is a great soul. She complained the kitchen was not clean. It still was so clean the floors were scrubbed white and there was order everywhere.

A week ago Annie Kate prepared and cooked a lunch for 40 guests. With them present, it meant preparing and cooking for 145 people. There are the patients and the nurses and the staff.

They are all—for Annie Kate—her people. And for each of the supervisors, the children in the wards are her children.

National Loop Takes Over Braves

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(UP)—The franchise of the Boston Braves was taken over tonight by the National League in the first step towards solving the financial affairs of that club. After a five-hour session in the office of Ford Frick, National League president, the club owners voted to take over the club and operate it until a satisfactory purchaser is found.

The club will continue in Boston, but every effort will be made to sell it before the major league meeting in Chicago, December 10. It is understood that Francis P. Murphy, wealthy shoe manufacturer of Nashua, N. H., and a minority stockholder in the Braves, will organize a syndicate to bid for the franchise.

Since August 1, when Judge Emil Fuchs resigned as president of the Braves, Charles Francis Adams, vice president and majority stockholder, has been trying to reorganize the club but his efforts were unsuccessful. Murphy attended the meeting, but while it was still in progress, apparently satisfied that all attempts to get the club affairs straightened out had failed, Adams and V. C. Bruce Whitmore, treasurer of the club, also represented the Boston club.

Before issuing an official statement, President Frick explained that "This is a friendly forfeiture."

This is the second time in the history of the league that it has taken over a club. In 1906 Philadelphia forfeited its franchise after several law suits growing out of a collapse of the stands.

No mention was made of Bob Quinn, Brooklyn business manager, who is rumored as a probable business manager of the Braves under the new regime.

Frick emphasized that the league, in taking over the players and franchise, does not take over the Braves' financial obligations. As far as obligations are concerned, the club still exists.

However, Frick said in case of a sale, as much money as possible would be turned over to the old club to pay its debts.

Adams, discussing the situation with reporters, said "It looks as though I've taken a loss. I've learned to take my medicine in the past."

He said he is not interested in bidding for the club. But if no one else bids for it and the league makes him a good offer, Adams might be interested.

The fire-breathing Lumpkin is not the only Macon boy who is regarded as a real prospect for future service on the varsity at Athens.

Ned Barbe, an end, is favorably regarded. And two other Atlanta boys, Carole Thomas, an end, and Hilton, Wall a tackle, are very promising.

The other three starting lineups are Athens boys and fine prospects. They are Harry Pattat, a tackle, and Walter Wilgong and Winston Hodgson, guards.

Coach Johnny Broadnax has lined up what is considered a very fine freshman team, regardless of the fact that it started slowly and lost to G. M. C. in its opening game.

There has been time since to work on the offense and pay further attention to the defense. All in all, it will be a team that will give the Baby Jackets of Tech a merry time Thursday afternoon.

Fully 15,000 fans are expected to throng Grant field to see the future varsity prospects of the two schools play. They'll settle the matter of supremacy and also aid the cause of crippled children. Tickets are $1 for reserved seats and 50 cents general admission. Officials for the game are T. L. Johnson, referee; J. J. Mumma, umpire; William Gardner, lineman, and Joel Adair, field judge.

Baby Jackets Warned To Watch Bullpup Ace

Quenton Lumpkin, Center, Heralded as Great Defensive Player; Stephens Leading Back.

By Jack Troy.

The Georgia Tech Baby Jackets are going to have 22 eyes wide open for one Georgia Bullpup player, in particular, when they meet Thursday afternoon at Grant field in the annual battle for the benefit of the crippled children of the Scottish Rite hospital.

The player is Quenton Lumpkin, center. Now, Lumpkin is no ball-carrying threat. He will not be feared on line plunges from the angle of carrying the ball. But he will be regarded as a menace on opening holes for the ball carrier.

It is not so much this department of play that has the "Baby Jackets" working over him, however. Lumpkin is an outstanding player back of the line on defense.

He is, they say, a combination Peter Pond and Walter Gilbert in the making. Lumpkin is far away from being a great star right now, of course. But he has the potentialities.

And so the Georgia Tech Baby Jackets are planning an attack calculated to function effectively despite the presence of the roving Lumpkin back of the Bullpup line.

ALL G. I. A. A. It is not often that a freshman center backs so much power that he has an opposing club aiming their guns at him, but it is nevertheless true in the case of Lumpkin, who was All-G. I. A. A. for two straight years at Lanier High school in Macon.

Tech freshmen have been warned that in some scrimmages against the Georgia varsity this year Lumpkin, who weighs 195, virtually wrecked the Bulldogs attack single-handed.

Marion Leathers, of Douglasville, fullback, and Lovell Schirm, of Savannah, quarterback, round out the backfield combination.

The fire-breathing Lumpkin is not the only Macon boy who is regarded as a real prospect for future service on the varsity at Athens.

Ned Barbe, an end, is favorably regarded. And two other Atlanta boys, Carole Thomas, an end, and Hilton, Wall a tackle, are very promising.

ANCIENT RIVALS COME TO GRIPS AS SEASON ENDS

Tech-Georgia, L. S. U.-Tulane, Ole Miss-Marlboro, in battles.

By Kenneth Gregory,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

General renewal of traditional grid iron rivalries closes the 1935 football season this week in the Southeastern conference.

Championship hopes hinge on a pair of battles, while upon the outcome of three of the ancient feuds rest state titles.

The undisputed conference title, championship of the state and a possible invitation to participate in the "Sugar Bowl" game on New Year's Day are at stake when Louisiana State's Tigers clash with Tulane at New Orleans for the 33d time since they began playing in 1893.

L. S. U. FAVORED.

Tulane's Green Wave, leading 15 games to 13 in the long series and co-champion a year ago with Alabama, does not figure to stop the Louisiana State powerhouse's title march. These eleven have played four tie games since the inaugural contest.

The 16th renewal of a rivalry that started in 1903 is slated when Vanderbilt and Alabama, each defeated but once in the Southeastern race, square off at Nashville on Thanksgiving Day. Vanderbilt has won eight times and Alabama seven in this feud.

Louisiana State, undefeated in the conference, must hurdle Tulane for an outright claim to the championship. Should the Green Wave eleven blast L. S. U.'s hopes the crown probably will go to the victor of the Vanderbilt-Alabama fray.

Alabama, high in the standings, improved after an early season tie with Howard and a loss to Mississippi State, is favored to defeat Vanderbilt.

Another important "state" scrap is on the program at Atlanta, where Georgia's Bulldogs and Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado clash for the 32d time in a series dating back to 1893. Georgia has won 15, Tech 11 and 3 ended in deadlocks.

NOT SINCE '28.

Georgia Tech has not defeated its neighboring enemy since 1928, when its great golden-shirted machine swept over everything in its path and beat Georgia 28 to 0. Since then, the rivalry has been a classic.

They played a scoreless tie in 1932 and Saturday's tussle is rated a toss-up.

At Lexington on Thanksgiving Day Tech and Kentucky resumed a long-standing rivalry that began in 1899, lasting for the 30th time. The Tennessee Volunteers have won 14 of the 15, Kentucky 9 and 6 were tied.

These traditional enemies battle for possession of an old beer keg, decorated in colors of the schools, that has been passed from the victors since 1925. The Blue Grass gridders have ruined the Volunteers' record three times in that interval with ties.

STATE RIVALRY.

The championship of Mississippi is up for decision when the University of Mississippi and Mississippi State meet for the 34th time at Oxford, renewing a rivalry that began in 1901.

Mississippi State surprised with victory over Alabama and Army, but lost to Vanderbilt and Louisiana State. Mississippi has beaten Tennessee and Florida, but lost by a one-point margin to Tennessee.

Alabama's Tigers and Florida's Alligators are paired in a Saturday tussle at Miami. Their meetings date from 1912 and the count in victories is deadlocked at seven each.

With the exception of one year since they resumed relations in 1927 after a break of nearly a decade Florida has turned in surprising victories.

The exception was in 1933 when Auburn conquered Florida 21 to 6, and was crowned champion of the old Southern conference.

Florida's victory was a surprise, but it was a hard-fought battle.

Alec Ashford Dislocates Elbow—May Miss Game Saturday

Holy Cross, T. C. U. L. S. U. Considered

Sugar Bowl Committee Favors These Three; N. Y. U. and Irish Mentioned.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Holy Cross, Texas Christian University and Louisiana State are being definitely considered for the second renewal of New Orleans' Sugar Bowl game New Year's Day, it was reliably learned tonight.

Although the Sugar Bowl committee will not extend any invitations until after the results of Saturday's games are learned it was known the committee members look with favor on the three above-mentioned eleven.

Since one of the contestants must come from the deep south it was considered almost certain that L. S. U.'s brilliant Tigers will get the call to represent Dixieland.

No major southern team boasts an undefeated record, but Coach Bernie Moore's Bengals have played through an extremely tough schedule with but a single loss, an early season 10-7 defeat at the hands of Rice Institute.

Experts were of the opinion that only a loss to Tulane Saturday, which would be in the nature of a major upset, will keep the Tigers out of the Sugar Bowl game.

Holy Cross, with only a tie game with Manhattan to mar its record, was reported to be the committee's eastern choice if the invitation is forwarded in that direction.

The Crusaders are said to have a good following in the south and sponsors of the New Year's classic believe the big Purple eleven would pack Tulane's stadium to capacity.

On the other hand an invitation may go to T. C. U.'s Horned Frogs if they get by Southern Methodist Saturday.

Belief was expressed that if T. C. U. wins Stanford will not select it for the Rose Bowl in view of the fact it is scheduled to appear on the west coast shortly before the first of the year against Santa Clara.

Too, it was believed here that if S. M. U. wins Saturday it will get the Rose Bowl bid and T. C. U. would be dropped from Sugar Bowl consideration.

Other teams said to be under the watchful eyes of the committee are New York University, Notre Dame and California.

Georgia Cagers Should Be Good

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 26.—Tulane University at New Orleans on December 20 and 21; and L. S. U. Tigers at Baton Rouge on December 23 form the forefront of Georgia's 1936 basketball schedule, according to Coach Rex Enright, who will assume charge of the squad next week.

In the absence of Coach Enright, who is backfield mentor on the grid team, Dan Bowden and Hal Gibson have been conducting the workouts. Several scrimmages have been held. Bowden, incidentally, sprained an ankle in a touch football game today and will miss several drills. Prospects are for a good season, with last year's squad returning almost intact.

Man Mountain Crushes Indian In Quick Time

The prodigal son, or perhaps, to put it more aptly, the fatted calf, returned to Atlanta for a brief appearance Tuesday night when Man Mountain Dean, alias Stone Mountain Leavitt, came back after an absence of four years, most of which have been passed profitably on the Pacific coast, to make short work of Tiny Roebuck, 200-pound Indian grappler, in the feature match of Henry Weber's opening card at the Atlanta theater.

Another short bout was offered in the semi-windup when Joe Cox proved entirely too big and too rough for Charlie Hanson, of St. Louis. Joe took the first fall in 21 minutes when Hanson collapsed in the effort to lift him with a crotch hold, and the second in eight minutes with three front headlocks and a body press.

Frank Speer and Tom Marvin went 30 minutes to a draw in the opener. There was little or no wrestling, but the boys exchanged punches, chokes and eye-gouging with engaging abandon.

Attired in much wrinkled red and black tights (which may augur well for Georgia's chances next Saturday) and resembling nothing so much as Henry VIII just aroused from a heavy sleep, the bearded Dean presented a picturesque figure as he entered the ring. His weight was announced as 317 pounds, most of which seemed to be concentrated in an abdomen of awe-inspiring dimensions.

Roebuck started out briskly enough, but was unable to make any of his holds stick, Dean breaking them with seeming ease. Then Tiny let fly with a series of floating elbows and seemed to be getting somewhere at last. Next he launched a butt at that tempting midriff, but bounced back as if he had run headlong into a brick wall. As he lay groaning on the mat, Dean lumbered over, jumped into the air and landed on him with all his weight. This is the "Man Mountain's best hold." The fall required just nine minutes.

Coming back, the composite House of David ended matters in just 25 seconds, with two forearm punches, a body slam and a body block concluding the entertainment. A good-sized crowd saw the show, and another was announced for next Tuesday night.

Grant Park Girls Form Court Team

Girls of the Grant Park Methodist church have organized a basketball team to play in Atlanta this season and they desire practice games with girl teams playing boys' rules in this section. Any team desiring practice games please call Marjorie Howe, Main 8415 for arrangements.

The team is composed of Keitha Hazelriggs, Madeline Bowman and Leonard Dunn, forwards; Irma Lackey and Melba Allen, centers, and Mildred Georgia, Marjorie Howe and Hazel Coffield, guards. The team hopes to make a creditable showing in league play this winter.

There has been no indication whether the Yankee eleven would accept. Ernest Seiler, head of the recreation department, said the invitation was not formal—just a "feeler."

No other teams have been asked to participate in the game. A representative of the south or southwest, and one of the east or midwest, is wanted.

A suit of clothes will be awarded to the winner of each of these two separate events in which five games will be bowled.

A beautiful silver trophy will be awarded to the winner of a three-game ladies' handicap duckpin sweepstakes.

Hogue's 333, which included games of 107, 120, 111, was high for the Sinclair Refining Company league. M. H. Davis had 319, Wilson, 317; Earley and Walters, 300 each, in some of the other heavy scoring.

Ed Northcutt had a 333 series to top bowling in the C. & S. Bank league, with games of 95, 110, 128, to build up the big total. Walker had 305 and Bennett 304 in the bank loop.

Frank Reeves had the high three-game score of 316 for the America Fore Insurance league, with Pop O'Neal having the high single game of 121, Tuesday.

Cox had the high three games for the Southern Waxing Paper Company league with a 305 series, which included a big 116 game.

Battle Broadnax will have 58 players in uniform.

In this connection, Johnny has come in for a lot of riding from H. J. Stegeman, Georgia athletic director; Harry J. Mehre, varsity coach, and Rex Enright, varsity backfield chief, about Broadnax trying to compete with the large varsity squads of such big shots as Notre Dame, Ohio State, Minnesota and Stanford.

But Broadnax is not trying to outdo Notre Dame and the rest. He actually is going the other way better, for except at home, his team ever carried more than 44 men.

The Bullpup mentor is getting things fixed up to lick the Baby Jacks, who will be heavy favorites for the charity tussle, he says. At least he is going to outnumber them.

"Now," the former Georgia quarterback says, "if I could use the whole 58 at one time I know we could beat them."

Broadnax said today he still planned to start a team composed entirely of Georgia boys. And when he sends in replacements, they will be mostly Georgia boys, too.

SCORE 256 POINTS.

In 14 games on the gridiron with the Florida Gators, the Alabama Poly Tigers have scored 250 points. Florida's scoring total in the games with Auburn, which will be renewed for the fifteenth time in Miami next Saturday, has mounted to 146 points.

Song Dedicated To Fielding Yost

It's called "It's a Great Big Mouschegian Day," and the composer, who also wrote Michigan's "Varsity" march, says it was inspired by Yost's pronunciation of "Michigan."

MUSTANG-T. C. U. GAME PROMISES FANS 'THRILLER'

"Sky Parade" Foreseen Saturday With Possible Bowl Bid to Victor.

By Bill Parker.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Texas Christian and Southern Methodist Universities promise one of the most spectacular football aerial battles of all time when they clash here Saturday.

Five Southwest Conference aerial machines have been grounded in defeat, leaving the untied and unbeaten Methodists and Christians to battle out the championship between themselves.

There is a possible Rose Bowl bid for the winner.

These two teams, among the nation's five major untied and undefeated eleven, plan to fog the air with flying leather before an expected crowd of 40,000.

A state already gone football mad in one of the most spectacular seasons of years, with some of the country's best talent on display here, is set for a nerve-racking climax.

Forwards, laterals, flat zone and basket passes will be on in a sky parade for which both teams began polishing off in workouts today.

Coaches of teams that have been riddled by the Christians and Methodists call it "football suicide" to attempt to match aerial power with either.

Slinging Sammy Baugh, Christian signal caller, and Robert Wilson, Methodist halfback, are the sharpshooters. Both were reported in excellent physical shape for a bombardment at the conference championship.

Behind screens of perfect blocking and with swift, alert receivers to pull their passes out of the air, Baugh and Wilson are deliberate but both get the ball away amazingly fast. They spot their targets and then practically throw the ball down their throats.

Auburn and N. Y. U. Favored by Miami

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 26.—A bid to play in the second annual Orange Bowl game here New Year's Day has been extended New York University, the city recreation department announced today.

Rival Coaches Meet; And Spar Carefully

Mehre and Alexander Appear on Program for Hospital Game.

By Ralph McGill.

Harry Mehre was in our town last night helping out with a little program in behalf of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

The freshmen of Georgia and Georgia Tech play a game Thursday afternoon for those crippled children.

Mr. Mehre foresees a great game. The head coach at Georgia thinks the freshmen will provide a rare bit of entertainment.

But at last I managed to bring Mr. Mehre around to his own game with Georgia Tech—the varsity game of Saturday, which is to be played to a crowd of some 30,000. Maybe more.

"We are still flat," he said, "but I thought I detected some signs of coming out of it at the Tuesday practice. I hope so. If we don't play a real ball game I know we are likely to lose."

DEFENSE CRAZY.

"We took a look at that Tech lateral stuff long enough yesterday to have our defenses crazy. We tried two or three and not one of them seemed very good. We'll keep trying Wednesday Thursday, Friday and Saturday."

Mr. Bill Wardlaw and Mr. Jake Harris managed to get Mr. William Alexander together at the same program with Mr. Mehre. They spent 15 minutes answering questions.

"Alex," said Harry, "do you really use all the stuff our scouts report?"

"Well, I think the boys make it up as they go along," said Alex.

"How about you dropping your spin plays and letting Alex drop his laterals?" asked Mr. Harris.

ONLY A KICK.

"Then we wouldn't have anything left but a kick," said Mr. Mehre.

Both coaches agreed carefully in the questioning. They agreed the freshman game would be a great game. They think their varsity game will be one also.

But the real attitude was expressed by someone innocently asked:

"Will the practice you do from now until game time really do any good?"

"Man, we hope so," said both coaches enthusiastically.

400 ENTER HUGE X-COUNTRY RUN

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 26.—(AP)—A record field of approximately 400 cross country runners from 15 states will compete in the tenth annual interscholastic championships at Branch Brook park Thursday morning.

Nott Terrace High school, of Somerset, N. Y., winner of the team title the past two years, will be favored to repeat and take permanent possession of the championship trophy.

W. Central High, will defend his individual title. His foremost rivals are expected to be Ray Trail, a full-blooded Indian who has beaten Daugherty in three major events this year, and Wade Campbell, of Fremont, Ohio.

Schools from New Jersey, New York, New York, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, North Carolina, Michigan and Ohio will send teams.

"I'VE HAD ENOUGH."

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 26.—(AP)—After clowning through the greater portion of the bout, Wildcat Monte, Fort Worth, Texas, fighter, suddenly cried: "I've had enough of this," lifted aloft the right hand of Joey Speigel, Pittsburgh, Pa., welterweight, and jumped from the ring early in the ninth round of a scheduled 10-round bout here tonight. Both men scaled 145.

And for the man who tends the furnace, there is a mighty feeling of pride in being connected with the institution.

Children come in helpless and in pain and go out into the world walking and restored to normal life. This football game of Thursday does much to keep the hospital open. The Sunday movies help. The two keep the hospital going—the two combine to do the finest humanitarian work in

LIEUT. WILLIAM FOLEY IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

Pioneer Coast Guard Aviator Was Noted for Rescue Work at Sea.

SALEM, Mass., Nov. 26.—(P)—Infection resulting in death, today cut short a career of heroism for Lieutenant William L. Foley, 38, one of Uncle Sam's pioneer coast guard aviators.

congressional lifesaving medals, Foley had figured in the news many times during missions of mercy during his 14 years in the navy. In the spring of 1934, in the form of his septic poisoning, which set in last Thursday, caused his death. Foley, 35, was transferred to New England from Miami, Fla., two years ago, took part in a sensational rescue off the coast of Florida on New Year's Day, 1932.

On that occasion Foley was co-pilot of a coast guard plane crew which defied a storm, located and rescued a boy lying unconscious on the bottom of a small boat, 100 miles off shore, and then taxied its damaged machine ashore despite storm-lashed seas.

Foley came to Salem early this year as commander of the new coast guard aviation station which was built under his supervision here.

A native of Calais, Maine, he served in the navy during the World War and ended the coast guard aviation service in 1931. He leaves a widow and two sons.

Full military honors will be paid Foley at funeral services at the air station here tomorrow afternoon at Arlington National Cemetery, fellow officers said tonight.

A convoy of planes will escort the body to the funeral.

James Roosevelt Will Be Honored By Atlantans

Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. McGehee Jr., will entertain at a luncheon on Saturday at their home on Andrews drive, in honor of James Roosevelt, son of President Roosevelt and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. McGehee are friends of long standing. They were schoolmates at Groton school at Groton, Mass., and attended Harvard University. They graduated from Harvard in the class of 1925, and their friendship dates back to their prep school days.

The luncheon will precede the Tech-Georgia football game. A small group of socially prominent Atlantans will be invited to meet Mr. Roosevelt, who will be among the most notable week-end visitors. After the football game, Mr. and Mrs. McGehee will accompany Mr. Roosevelt to Warm Springs to visit at the "Little White House," the Georgia home of President Roosevelt.

Miss Anne Alston, Mrs. Beers Honored

Miss Mary Ann Carr and Miss Louisa Robert entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Piedmont Dining Club as a complimentary gesture to Miss Anne Alston, whose marriage to John Fitten Glenn takes place on December 18. Miss Alston, the lovely bride-elect, shared honors with Mrs. W. H. Beers Jr., the former Miss Frances Haven, at the tea given yesterday by Mrs. E. B. Proctor at her residence on The Prado in Ansley Park. Mrs. Philip Alston, mother of the honor guest, assisted in receiving. Pink chrysanthemums beautified the reception rooms, and the lace-covered table in the dining room was adorned with a pink bowl filled with pink flowers, and silver candelabra held pink tapers.

Presiding at the coffee table were Mrs. Edgar Pomeroy and Mrs. Thomas W. Pitt, and assisting in the dining room were Mrs. C. A. Woolford, Misses Mary Lucile Proctor and Elise Merriam. Serving punch were Misses Catherine Tift and Emily Andrews.

Invited were Joyce Murdock, Tommy Davis, Mary Lewis, Connie Murdock, Buddy McCall, Jimmy Grant, Paul Upton, Carolyn Lathum, Paula Gorman and Jimmy McCurdy.

THE EIGHTH WOMAN Why She is Always Herself

All women are not born "free and equal." Nature being what it is. Many readers of this newspaper know this to their sorrow. Woman's days are not all alike. There are difficult days when some women suffer severely.

There didn't used to be anything to do about it. Eight million had to suffer month after month. Today, a million have accepted the relief to be had from Midol.

As a rule, it is a knowing woman who keeps that little aluminum case tucked in her purse. One who knows what to wear, where to go, how to take care of herself, how to get the most out of life. That "eighth woman" who has learned to rely on Midol!

A smart woman doesn't try every pill or tablet somebody says is good for periodic pain. But Midol is recommended by specialists. It can form no habit because it is not a narcotic. But Midol is effective even when the pain has reached its height. It's effective for hours, so two tablets should see you comfortably through your worst day.

Atlantan's Father Is Honored By Pilgrims of Great Britain

By Sally Forth.

ATLANTANS have great pride in the fact that Dr. John H. Finley, of New York, achieved distinction by being honor guest at a dinner of the Pilgrims of Great Britain given recently in London, this honor being usually reserved for ambassadors and the highest ministers of the state. This prominent American is the father of Mrs. William H. Kiser Jr., whom he frequently visits, being well known and greatly admired here. The Earl of Derby, president of the Pilgrims of Great Britain, presided at the dinner, and Viscount Allenby, whose friendship with Dr. Finley began in Palestine during the World War, paid tribute to the honor guest. The list of important guests showed the deep and widespread respect in which Dr. Finley is held in England.

Of all the honors that have been bestowed upon Dr. Finley he is proudest of holding the position of associate editor of the New York Times.

Dr. Finley represented the United States at the Andrew Carnegie centenary celebration at Dumferline, Scotland, and Atlanta radio listeners heard his speech delivered last Monday on the 100th birthday anniversary of the great philanthropist whose huge fortune benefited humanity by establishing libraries all over the United States.

The ingenuity of Amelle Harrington was never more originally expressed than in the novel decorations featuring the supper party given last evening at the Driving Club by Felix Joseph Commagere after the wedding rehearsal of his daughter, Mary Louise Commagere, and Albert S. Adams Jr., whose marriage takes place this morning.

Ever ready to lend a helping hand to any event centering around her relatives and friends, Amelle requested permission to provide the decorations for the party. And since today's groom is a favorite nephew of Amelle's, she was more anxious than ever to make the happy event one long to be remembered.

The Thanksgiving spirit was expressed in every detail of the attractive decorations, with the autumn shades prevailing in the color motif. Amelle chose a handsome deep cream tailored damask cloth for the table covering. In the center stood a barrel-shaped maple sugar bucket with copper hangings. Slender sprays of red-berried foliage, bronze-shaded chrysanthemums and African daisies filled the bucket in artistic arrangement.

Wooden trays, holding hors d'oeuvres, were arranged on the table. Brass candelabra burning deep cream tapers added a festive note to the setting. Boughts of richly tinted leaves, bunched the corners of the room where supper was served and reflected the autumn motif. The guests included members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests, who agree with Sally that Amelle should be voted the palm for producing unique and attractive decorations.

TWO of Sally's favorite belles will be met from the Thanksgiving festivities here, but they have a grand time in store for them nevertheless. Carol and Elizabeth Hopkins left yesterday for New York with Colonel and Mrs. Philip Gage and will attend the hop Friday evening at the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.

The brass buttons will hold further appeal for these young charmers, as they will attend the Army-Navy gridiron classic on Saturday in Philadelphia. After the game Carol goes to Darien, Conn., to visit Mrs. Floyd Jefferson, whom Atlanta remembers as Eleanor Alsop.

GLIMPSED here and there: Mrs. George Adair Jr. looks very stunning in black taffeta costume and a black hat trimmed with paradise feathers. Everybody delighted over Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright's recovery from broken ankles, and she is greeted affectionately by her legion of friends at the Carroll Payne golden wedding anniversary reception. Carey Wilmer Jr. up from Tampa to "free-wheel it" at the Nine O'Clocks tonight at the Piedmont Driving Club. Bob Schwab Jr. looking oh so grand in full dress at Joyce Smith's debut ball. Mrs. Raymond Johnson looking too beautiful in pale green satin entertaining at tea in her green drawing room. Sally hears that Esmond Brady "does it alone" tonight at the Nine O'Clocks' swell ball.

Miss Cheek Honored.

Special favors for the guests were miniature pictures of the bride-elect. Several contests were enjoyed and prizes were won by Mrs. McKamy, Mrs. Harry Standridge and Miss Dot Steerman. Present were Misses Carolyn Cheek, Emma Cheek, Dot Steerman, Georgia Clay Sharmon, Lucile Powell, Hazel Overton, Clara Benning, Martha Fincher, Asile Daniel, Irl McDonald, Ruth McDonald, Mesdames Emmie Cheek, Gladys Carrington, Joe Bartlett, H. L. Cheek, Eva Moorhead, Mack Wynn, Frank Bell, Cecil Trainor, Roy Ellis, Harry Standridge, Dorothy Cheek, P. H. Savin, Riland McDonald and W. E. McKamy.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lord Nisbet were hosts last evening at a dinner party at the Piedmont Driving Club in honor of Mrs. Jonathan Bryan, of Richmond, Va., guest of Major and Mrs. Selin Myers at their quarters at Fort McPherson.

Covers were laid for the honor guest, Major and Mrs. Myers, Colonel Charles Patterson, Major and Mrs. Donald Henley, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Daly and the hosts.

Mrs. Berry Honors Debutante Niece At Reception

Mrs. Frank M. Berry entertained at a reception yesterday afternoon at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue in Druid Hills, in honor of her niece, Miss Judy Beers, a popular debutante. The hostess and honor guest received in the living room, where quantities of chrysanthemums in the autumnal shades prevailed in the decorations.

The tea tables were arranged in the dining room and the sun parlor. Both tables were overlaid with handsome Venetian lace cloths. In the dining room the table was centered with an arrangement of pastel-shaded flowers in a tall silver vase flanked by silver candelabra holding lighted yellow tapers. The table in the sun parlor had a centerpiece of bronze-shaded flowers in a large silver bowl, and candelabra held lighted green tapers.

Pouring tea was Mesdames H. W. Beers, Coley Lewis, Ernest Brown, George Rowbottom, and assisting in entertaining were Mesdames J. A. Carroll, Stephen Beers, of Taunton, Mass.; H. W. Beers Jr., William Percy, F. B. Ramey, L. G. Fischer, Robert Cousins, Freeman Strickland, J. H. Hines, Guy Woolford, J. N. McKinley, Davis Thornton and Virgil Hooks, of Forsyth, and Misses Kate Carroll, Leone Brooks, Martha de Golan and Florence Hancock, of Cartersville.

The honor guest was gowned in a dress of white and silver lame, trimmed with a soft crushed green velvet sash, and Mrs. Berry wore a handsome gown of turquoise blue satin, and both wore shoulder sprays of orchids. During the afternoon 250 guests called to meet the debutante.

She is pictured in the ivory satin gown brocade in gold roses and gold leaves which she wore upon the auspicious occasion. Priceless rose point lace formed the graceful sleeves, the exquisite lace being the same lace which trimmed Mrs. Payne's wedding gown when as Miss Helen Hill she became the lovely bride of Mr. Payne on November 25 at a brilliant ceremony which took place in Atlanta in the immaculate Conception church in 1885. ## Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON, World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

A BRILLIANT OPENING LEAD. The defender's privilege of making the first lead is an equivalent one. Depending on the card or suit selected, it may pay handsome dividends or result in ruin.

If the opening lead were made only after careful scrutiny of all four hands I believe that fully half the game contracts fulfilled against an average blind opening lead would be defeated. Please note that I have specified average in this assertion. It is true that no player alive can invariably make a "double dummy" opening lead, but a gifted few come close to this standard.

The hand shown below was played in an important tournament. The South player deserves to wear the accolade, "Brilliant Opening Leader." North, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:
North	East	South	West
1♥	1♠	2♦	3♣
2♥	3♠	Pass	4♣
Double	Pass	Pass	Redouble
[Final bid]

South, on lead, had much food for thought. His partner had bid and rebid hearts, so his singleton eight was the conventionally proper opening. But it appeared doubtful, in view of the strong bidding by both opponents, that the heart and diamond remnants were distributed evenly, or that enough tricks could be won in the suits to defeat the contract. North's double indicated a sure trick in trumps to act as "control." If North also had a singleton club, and it could be removed while South retained the diamond ace as entry, a club ruff might be the setting trick.

South acted on this line of reasoning and led a low diamond. The subsequent play followed his diagnosis perfectly. North won the first lead of trumps and put South in with a diamond. A second club was led and ruffed by North, who could not be prevented from winning a heart trick later for the contractor's defeat. Had the heart been led, East needed to be careful of only one thing; to enter dummy with a diamond rather than a club which would have allowed a later ruff.

TODAY'S QUESTION. Question: My partner led the heart deuce against a contract of four spades. Dummy held hearts 9 3 and I held hearts K 10 4. What card should I play?

Answer: The ten. Your partner's lead of the deuce shows a four-card suit, so declarer has three hearts. If he has the queen, one trick must make. If he has the ace, the ten is your best play to hold him to one heart trick. If he has both ace and queen, the ten offers the only hope of salvaging a heart trick.

TOMORROW'S HAND. South, dealer. Neither side vulnerable.

Barbara Bell Patterns

THIS DAY DRESS HAS EXCITING DETAILS.

Pattern 1774-B. The neckline of this dress is perfect. It comes up high about the throat, but the effect is achieved with some subtlety. There isn't a collar, but the fabric that goes into the making of the narrow front panels, and the shoulder yoke is shaped in such a way that it stands up around the neck, and continues on down the entire length of the sleeves.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

(Posed by Wera Engels.)

Something With Which To Make Your Skin Smell Like Lilacs

By MIGNON.
Skin perfume has become the rage. It doesn't matter how good a perfume is, or how sure you are that it will not stain your clothes, it is always a smart thing to put it on your skin rather than on your clothes. One of the fine perfumes I wouldn't be without, stains my clothes and that of perfumes. But it happens to many others, because most women perfume their skins now rather than their clothes.

A fine thing has just come on the market: a dusting powder with a bottle of skin perfume (both in a perfect lilac) tucked into the powder puff in the top of the box. The bottle, coming with the bath powder, gives you the perfect suggestion—to use a skin perfume and bath powder that are alike. Of course to like this you must like the scent of lilacs. But I have yet to find anyone who doesn't.

The beautiful thing about this box, is that on the cover, in colors, it is in a narrow band. Two buttons, linked together, finish the top of the panels and hold them together, and the same buttons are repeated in the fastening of the tailored belt. Then there are most unusual pockets perched on each hip. They are sort of like an envelope flap, only not entirely so, and each one has a button to make it more interesting. The skirt has a seam down the front, and a wide inverted pleat that starts at the knees, so that it will be comfortable for walking about.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1774-B is designed in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) requires 2 3/4 yards of 54-inch material. Price of pattern 15 cents in coin. Stamps will not be accepted.

NANCY PAGE

These Look Like Real Flowers On the Handkerchiefs.

By FLORENCE La GANKE.

Nancy's nice jolly postman brought her a package that she opened with curiosity. It had come from her sister, Joan's mother. Doria was now in Paris and had sent Nancy a few gay and giddy handkerchiefs. As soon as Nancy saw them she found a way of using the idea for some Christmas gift handkerchiefs. Those which she received had been made of brown linen. On the linen in one corner of the handkerchief had been applied a flower of quite good size. The flower was made up of small bits of linen and usually the colors were such that the flower had a natural appearance.

For instance, the pansy on one handkerchief was done in shades of yellow and lavender and purple. A carnation or pink was done in deep rich red. This one was applied on a beige linen handkerchief.

A sweet pea in dainty shades of pink and white was applied on a pale blue handkerchief.

Nancy saw no reason why she couldn't shop for plain colored linen handkerchiefs. Then she could use up scraps of fine linen or even fine gingham that she had to apply her flowers.

She worked out a buttercup spray and a spiny cactus that would be smart and attractive on the pocket handkerchiefs.

She has the designs of just the right size. They are not small, for

"Three Men on a Horse"

Plays to Big Audience

"Three Men on a Horse," well-cast cleverly staged comedy which is running this week at the Erlanger theater, played last night before another audience that appreciated its fine acting and pleasant humor.

Concerning a writer of greeting card verse who is held in a hotel room by three race track touts because of his gift at picking winning horses, the play is racy and filled from beginning to end with rich, wholesome humor. Chester Clute as the timid, introverted versifier, Erwin Frowbridge, plays his part to perfection.

Climax of the play comes when it appears to the three touts that "twin has tricked them in a selection of a horse. It turns out that he hasn't, and Erwin, the meek versifier who all along as tried conscientiously to return to his office, turns angrily on the largest of the three and emerges a fighter and a man sure of himself. Elaine Temple does a fine bit of acting as the wife who hen-pecks Erwin, but becomes frantic when she thinks him kidnapped. Sheldon Leonard, Edward Colbrook and Frank Otto, the "three men," all turn in fine performances, as also does Marjorie Cameron, as one of the touts' sweetheart.

The play will be presented here tonight this week, with matinees on Thursday and Saturday. Management of the theater said yesterday many tickets were being sold for the remaining performances. Between acts

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Sellers again outpulled buyers in the stock market tug-of-war today.

A number of active issues gave up 1 to more than 3 points each. Declines were on a somewhat broader front than in the previous session, but shares changing hands were over 1,000,000 less than on Monday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks lost 9 of a point, at 54.5. The 30 industrials led the downward procession with a drop of 1.5 points, at 75.6, while the 15 rails lost only 3 of a point, and the utility division 6 of a point.

Periods of pressure during the day's dealings found the market showing a tendency to slow up, but the pressure continued, and the market closed at a net loss of 2,363,510 shares.

Domestic business news continued of a kind generally encouraging to bullish forces. This fact appeared to be offset, most Wall Street experts felt, by the approach of the critical parliamentary test of the Laval government in France and the Thuringian election in Germany. Realizing and a temporary side-line position appeared to be attractive to many.

Brokers' Views

COURTS & CO.—Discrimination of buyers to make a market for the day's offerings, combined with the somewhat critical political and financial situation in Europe, was the main reason for the decline in the stock market today.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Small fluctuations and nervous tendency toward slightly lower levels persisted over the corporate bond market today.

While there were a few outstanding exceptions in scattered securities, over the main body of offerings turned over within small price ranges, and the market was in the minus column at the end.

United States government bonds, par value, kept turnover in the background again and pursued no definite trend. Closing prices were 2-32nds to 5-32nds lower.

Only one of the five groups of bonds used in the Associated Press average showed a change, that for the 20 rails showing a drop of a point at 83.2. Transfers of $10,011,000 were more than $3,000,000 under that of Tuesday.

Investment circles viewed the tapering activity of the market for lower level offerings with some concern, but the opinion that reactionary sentiment was due more to definite change in the long-term outlook for bonds.

Sugar and Coffee.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Raw sugar was quiet today with the undertone easier. Both the only active market was for the 3-32nds.

The only sale reported was one concluded late last week involving 10,000 bags of raw sugar at the 3-32nds level.

Prices were moderately active and futures were moderately increased. Commission liquidation, promoted by the clearing house, was 10 to 15 points lower. Sales 15,000 tons.
